

JOHNSON DENOUNCES REPUBLICAN LEADERS BEFORE GREAT CROWD Reactionaries Suddenly Claim Credit For Laws They Have Opposed For Four Years CITES SHORT AS EXAMPLE OF POLITICAL ACROBAT

Twenty-five hundred people gave Governor Johnson one of the most enthusiastic receptions he has been accorded since he started his present campaign, at the Auditorium last night.

These people heard him tell of the record of the state administration for the past four years, heard him describe the acrobatic abilities of the Republican party leaders, and cheered loudly when he asked them to imagine Harrison Gray Otis and John D. Spreckels as unifiers of humanity.

Frank H. Short was described by the Governor as one of the acrobats of the Republican party, particularly because of the speech he made at the Republican state convention in Sacramento a week ago. In that speech he denounced every piece of progressive legislation enacted in the past four years and urged that it be embodied. A moment after he had concluded his address, three men, Eddie Wolfe, Milton Schmitt and Martin Kelly of San Francisco, whom the Governor described as "illustrious statesmen," brought in the Republican platform which praised the very laws Short a moment before had denounced but said "we did it."

Turn Somersault.

Governor Johnson told how the Republicans for the past four years had denounced as "fraud" and "destructive," the legislation that has been enacted in California in the past four years and how in the last two months they have turned a complete back somersault and are pointing to that legislation as work nobly done and are proclaiming loudly that they did it. He referred to that did not care what it advocated, if it thought it met with popular approval.

He declared that he was willing to stand or fall on the workman's compensation act, which Otis, De Young and Spreckels had denounced so bitterly up to two months ago. He told how their attitude had suddenly changed and then said: "Imagine Harrison Gray Otis and John D. Spreckels as unifiers of humanity," the balance of the sentence was lost in the cheering that followed.

The drafting of the public utilities act by the special session of the legislature in 1911 and the writing of it into the constitution of the state by the people, were all denunciations, the Governor sarcastically declared, for only last week John D. Fredericks, in a speech at San Diego, declared that he had enacted this law in a fourth of July oration delivered in Long Beach in 1907.

Costly District Attorney.

He took John D. Fredericks to task for going about the state preaching about economy especially when the district attorney's office, which he runs in Los Angeles is the most costly district attorney's office in the United States.

He declared that he would pay no attention to the Democratic candidate for governor because he regarded him merely as the stalking horse for Fredericks.

He contrasted the work of the present railroad commission with the commissions in existence before 1911. Before 1911 he said there was a railroad and the railroad was the commission but since 1911, he said, there has been a railroad commission. And yet he asserted the Republicans have had the effrontery, in face of the records of the old commissions, to declare that there were railroad commissions before 1911.

Withdrawing the generals, colonels, captains, majors, and other officers with which he said the Republican party was infested, Governor Johnson declared that it was evident that the rank and file were progressive. No better evidence, he said, could be given, than the vote cast for John D. Schmitt, for lieutenant governor on the Republican ticket. This vote, given in spite of the fact that Schmitt had announced himself as an out and out Progressive, the Governor was ample proof that the rank and file will not be hoodwinked by the actions of the reactionary leaders.

Thomson Presides.

T. H. Thomson, Progressive candidate for assemblyman in the fifty-first district, presided at the big meeting, being introduced by H. C. Wilber, chairman of the Progressive County Central Committee. A band of music, which he spoke, briefly on the achievements of the administration and pointed out the necessity of electing men to the legislature who will be in sympathy with the administration. For this reason he urged the election of Progressive candidates.

W. F. Chandler, Progressive candidate for state senator in the twenty-sixth district, presided over Governor Johnson in the speaking. He told of his service in the legislature and mentioned particularly the state highway act and the "burning" act, which he was largely instrumental in getting enacted into law.

More than 3,000 people heard Governor Johnson speak yesterday afternoon and in each place he was given a very enthusiastic reception. A great deal of interest was manifested in each of the three towns in the governor's coming and each tried to outdo the other in its reception.

W. F. Chandler, Progressive candidate for state senator, accompanied Governor Johnson and spoke briefly at each of the meetings. Chandler urged support of the present administration. At Kingsburg he pointed to the service he has done in the legislature as sufficient evidence that he is better fitted than any other man in Fresno county now seeking the office, to serve the county in the state senate.

Before an audience of about 150 at Fowler, Johnson devoted some time to the position of Frank H. Short in the Republican state convention. He told how Short had waxed eloquent in a speech denouncing every bit of progressive legislation that had been enacted in the past four years, and accepted, without dissent, the platform presented by those illustrious patriots, Eddie Wolfe and Milton Schmitt of San Francisco. In which, it was stated that the work of the past four years was nobly done, but "we" did it. Such a somersault as Short turned at the Republican convention, Governor Johnson said, was quite a feat, but not out of keeping with the acrobatic stunts that have been done by the Republican leaders in the past few months.

H. C. Wurth, city attorney of Fowler, presided at the meeting.

1,200 Hear Him at Selma.

The schools and stores were closed at Selma, during the time Governor Johnson spoke there. The meeting was held in the city park and an audience of more than 1,200 crowded around the stand to listen to the Governor. He was given an exceedingly cordial reception upon his arrival and throughout his speech was frequently interrupted by bursts of applause.

W. H. Shaffer, a prominent Selma Progressive, presided at the meeting there.

Governor Johnson's entrance into Kingsburg was featured by an automobile parade in which sixteen machines participated. One machine, loaded with young women, carried a big orange and green Kingsburg banner.

At Kingsburg a fair holiday was declared in order that all who desired might have an opportunity to hear the Governor. A temporary platform was erected over more than 1,000 stood or sat in machines or buggies, within hearing distance. A big wagon loaded with sweatboxes was utilized by more than a score, as a vantage point, and the sweatboxes were literally covered with people.

Dr. Flora W. Smith, Progressive county central committeeman, presided at this meeting.

Meetings Today.

Governor Johnson will address three meetings today. The first will be held at Coalinga at 11 o'clock this morning. Arrangements have been made over there for a big meeting and it is expected that a crowd of many hundreds will turn out to hear the Governor. W. F. Chandler will also speak at this meeting.

Another big meeting has been arranged at Lemoore at 3 o'clock this afternoon, repatriation for which have been energetically under way.

The people of Hanford, regardless of party affiliations, are preparing a very cordial reception for Governor Johnson tonight. A band will be in attendance, both at Hanford and at Lemoore.

The Exeter Progressives, under the leadership of H. H. Chandler, son of W. E. Chandler, expect a large turnout there tomorrow afternoon. The meeting will be held in Schmidt's garage and opera chairs are being installed.

DEMOCRATS DECIDE
HOW POSTOFFICES
SHALL BE FORMED

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 23.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the Democratic State Central committee held here today, Sydney M. Van Wyck was elected chairman and Robert P. Troy, secretary. William M. Humphrey of Los Angeles, vice-president of the Central Committee, was selected to take charge of the Democratic campaign south of the Tehachas.

That resolution was adopted providing that selection for postmaster should be made by respective county committees. Candidates then would be certified by the chairman and secretary of the county committee, and forwarded to the State Central committee. This committee, in turn, would forward the names of the proper authorities in Washington.

TO BURY GRIER AT LEAD.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 23.—The funeral of the body of Thomas John Grier, regional manager of the Home-Steel, Alloy and Lead, who died here last night after an attack of heart trouble, will be held tonight for lead, where the funeral will be held probably Monday. Mrs. Grier accompanied the body.

REBUKES BANKS FOR CHARGING EXCESSIVE RATES OF INTEREST

Secretary of Treasury McAdoo Refuses Government Aid To Institutions Offending In This Respect

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Secretary McAdoo tonight adopted stringent measures to urge national banks to extend legitimate credit and charge normal interest rates on loans. He telegraphed to ten national banks in the four reserve cities in the South that their requests for additional crop moving funds from the federal government would not be granted at this time, and made it clear that his action was taken in connection with reports of excessive interest rates and restriction of credits.

In a statement made public with the telegram, Mr. McAdoo declared that there was an extraordinary hoarding of money by banks throughout the country and that the government was not prepared to issue additional money to banks which were hoarding money and refusing to extend credit.

He said reports to the comptroller of the currency showed that money hoarding has been carried by banks to an extreme degree, and announced that he expected to focus attention upon the guilty banks by issuing a daily list of those with excessive reserves.

Although the federal government has no power over state banks or trust companies, the secretary explained that the state superintendents would be asked to furnish available information on money hoarding in such institutions. He characterized money hoarding by banks as the agency most likely to impair confidence and injure business.

McAdoo's Rebuke.

The statement in full says: "I have decided not to deposit the second installment of crop moving funds with your bank at this time. You can, however, if you desire, withdraw one-half of the securities deposited by you and use them as security for the issue of additional currency if you make application therefor. I am informed that many banks in four states are refusing to make any loan except for crop moving purposes and that in many cases good loans are rejected or unreasonable rates charged. I am also informed that many banks which have taken out additional currency are refusing to use it in spite of great demands for money. I shall withdraw all government deposits from banks charging excessive rates of interest, or which refuse reasonable accommodations, and I shall refuse to issue so-called emergency currency to banks which are making use of it on unreasonable terms for the benefit of the business community. It is essential in the present situation that everybody pull together in an unselfish spirit, for the good of the country. I, of course, expect the banks to make a reasonable charge for accommodations. My point is that the charge must be reasonable, as the co-operation and help of the treasury will not be extended on any other basis.

Course Indefensible.

The reports of national banks now being received by the comptroller of the currency in response to his call for a statement of conditions as of September 12, indicate an extraordinary hoarding of money by many national banks in various sections of the country. I am astonished that so many of the national banks are pursuing a course so contrary to the public interest and so indefensible from any point of view. There is neither occasion nor necessity for it. Full reports have not yet been received by the comptroller, but they are coming in daily. I intend to begin issuing daily a list of the banks which are hoarding money, by maintaining excessive reserves, in order that the country may know they are performing their duties. The reports of national banks are public property anyway, and while they have published in their respective communities, the significance of their statements is not generally understood. The publication does not know how to analyze them. My purpose is to focus attention upon the excessive reserves carried by those banks, for the reserves indicate whether or not the banks are using their full resources for the relief and accommodation of business in their respective communities.

State Banks Also.

"It is a matter of extreme regret that the government has not the power to exact similar statements from the state banks and trust companies throughout the country, because I am satisfied, from certain reports which have come to me, that many of the state banks and trust companies, like many of the national banks, are hoarding money and refusing to extend legitimate credits. I shall ask the superintendents of banks in the various states to co-operate with the government by supplying reports of the condition of the state banks and trust companies.

"The banks that are hoarding money should discontinue it. Such action, more than any other agency, tends to impair confidence and injure business. If all the banks of the country will do their duty in the present circumstances by extending legitimate credits at reasonable rates of interest, the most serious of our difficulties will at once disappear. The economic and financial condition of the country is sound throughout. The most essential thing now for our prosperity is the prompt conduct of business on a normal basis."

The secretary's statement was issued tonight after the federal reserve board, of which he is ex-officio member, had listened for several hours to plans for relief against the "committee of forty" of the Farmers' Union, which came to Washington to urge direct federal loans to cotton producers. The committee was told that it was impossible for the government to do more for them than it already had tried to do.

HOW KITCHENER
OUSTED CABINET

Forced French to Reconstruct Their Fighting Administration

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The failure of the military governor of Lille to give re-inforcements to the British forces at a time when they were in danger of annihilation during the battle of Mons, and the resultant protest Lord Kitchen, Great Britain's secretary for war, made to President Poincare, brought about the recent resignation of the French cabinet, according to Doctor Fred S. Mason of New York, who arrived here today on the Olympic.

Dr. Mason, while in France, was allowed to visit the hospital at Camp Marborough, Boulogne-sur-Mer, by Surgeon General Linden Bell of the British expeditionary force. He also visited various other hospitals prepared for the wounded at Boulogne, Trouville and Havre. At Boulogne, General Bell introduced him to a well-informed official of rank. The following is a report of the facts, as the official is said to have stated to him at Massor.

"When a force of 100,000 British, under General French, were opposed by over twice that number of Germans of General von Kluck's army at Mons, General French saw that he was in a desperate situation. After the first day of fighting, when it was seen that the overwhelming force of German troops threatened to surround the entire British expeditionary force, General French made an earnest appeal to General Joffre, commander of the French troops, requesting support on the left wing, where the British were entirely alone.

"Joffre wired instructions to the governor of Lille to send his garrison of 40,000 men to support the British forces. It appears, however, that the governor put the telegram in his pocket for forty-eight hours, in order, he said, to allow the women and children to evacuate Lille and this nearly brought about a defeat of the allies, and was certainly one of the main reasons why they were obliged to retreat toward Paris. The British managed to cut their way out of the German trap by almost super-human effort and at tremendous loss. They were in a critical situation at Mons when the reinforcements arrived.

"Although General French made no mention of the alleged failure of the French forces to assist him in his official report designed for publication, he sent a complete report and a bitter complaint direct to Lord Kitchen, saying that the failure of the French to answer his plea, put his whole army in jeopardy.

"Lord Kitchen was furious. He made a secret trip to Paris and laid his complaint against the military governor of Lille before President Poincare and the French minister of war. The latter, who was a friend of the general, completely ignored the report, and refused to punish him. President Poincare, however, to make every concession to Lord Kitchen, forced the resignation of the whole cabinet. This was on August 28, about a week after the battle of Mons. A very serious crisis in the affairs of the allies was thus averted and Lord Kitchen triumphed in his demand. The governor of Lille has been sent to an obscure post of duty."

VENEZUELAN REBEL
SUCCESS REPORTED

Rising Against Government Said to Be Vigorous

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, Sept. 23.—It is reported here that Venezuelan revolutionists under Horatio du Charme, surprised the Venezuelan government forces at Cano, Colorado, a port of entry in the former state of Bermudez, inflicting a defeat after which they captured Guannaco. The American employees of the asphalt company were fully protected and the property and money of the company was not touched.

Du Charme later repulsed the government troops sent against his, losing about ten men, while the government forces lost eighty killed and wounded.

The rising against the government, according to advices received here, appears to be well-supported in the region where the hostilities have occurred.

PRESIDENT SEES
PLAYER INJURED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—While President Wilson and his Naval Aide, Dr. Grayson, were playing golf at a local country club today, a player, George H. Chadwell, was knocked unconscious by a ball driven by a fellow club member. Dr. Grayson attended the injured man and the President sent him home in the White House car.

His official report designed for publication, he sent a complete report and a bitter complaint direct to Lord Kitchen, saying that the failure of the French to answer his plea, put his whole army in jeopardy.

"Lord Kitchen was furious. He made a secret trip to Paris and laid his complaint against the military governor of Lille before President Poincare and the French minister of war. The latter, who was a friend of the general, completely ignored the report, and refused to punish him. Kaiser Is Well.

BERLIN, via The Hague to London, Sept. 24.—(12:25 a. m.)—A diplomat who arrived here today from general headquarters in the field, told the Associated Press that Emperor William and his son were in the best of health and spirits and that the army was confident the conclusion of the war would be favorable.

The correspondent of the Tageblatt, who has just returned to Berlin from Suwalki, Russian Poland, reports that the Russian army took up a position behind the fortress at Kovno and that several German forces which were in pursuit engaged them in an artillery battle.

There has been a light fall of snow in the Vosges mountains. Michael Schwab, a prominent Bavarian Socialist, who is serving in the landwehr, has been awarded the Iron Cross.

The Vossische Zeitung in a dispatch from Hamburg, says the British occupation of the Humber islands in the Pacific has not excited the Hamburg merchants, who express pleasure that the Japanese were fore-ordained in taking them. The merchants are credited with saying that with the British in control, the rights of the coconut growers will not be endangered.

VILLA DECLARES HIS INDEPENDENCE FROM CARRANZA LEADERSHIP

ASIATIC CHOLERA APPEARS AMONG MAGYAR TROOPS

VENICE, Sept. 23, 1:40 p. m., via Paris, 6:35 p. m.—Nine cases of Asiatic cholera have been discovered among wounded soldiers in Hungary, according to an official announcement by the Hungarian minister of the interior. The announcement has excited great apprehension throughout the dual monarchy.

It is learned here that the first suspected case of cholera in Hungary was that of a wounded soldier, who was brought on September 15, to Rekesszent from the Gallian battlefield. The bacteriological examination clearly showed Asiatic cholera.

This patient was immediately isolated in the house of preventing further spread of the disease. Since then, eight other cases have been discovered also, among the wounded who returned from Gallia. One case was found at Munkacs, another at Tokod, and six at Dunaszekes, in Pressburg, immediately on the Austrian border, within an hour's ride of Vienna.

SAYS THAT POSTAL CLERKS FEAR TO BE ON PETITIONS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Senator Borah charged in the Senate today that railway mail clerks had been threatened with dismissal by the superintendent of the service because they had petitions in favor of his bill to prevent the use of watches or other time marking devices. He declared that he had received letters from several railway employees asking him to withdraw their names from petitions because they had been threatened. He wanted to get these letters to the postmaster general through the post-office committee.

U. S. MARINES PUT DOWN RIOT AT VERA CRUZ

VERA CRUZ, Sept. 23, 10:30 a. m.—American marines tonight quickly put down an incident riot here. A group of Constitutionalists who had entered the city were requested by the patrols to move on. They refused to obey the command and were then fired to comply.

A crowd gathered and offensive remarks were hurled at the Americans. Immediately marines under Captain Hooker moved into the midst of the throng and scattered it.

Hostilities Already Begun--- Troops Rush South to Meet Force From Zacatecas

EL PASO, Texas, Sept. 23.—General Francisco Villa, dominant leader in northern Mexico, tonight denounced the central government headed by Venustiano Carranza and announced his independence in a statement sent to the Associated Press.

This placed the state of Chihuahua in open revolt against the party in power at Mexico City as well as Sonora, the next border state to the west, where Governor Maytorena previously has proclaimed his independence of the Constitutionalist party as represented by Carranza.

Villa's Statement.

Villa's statement, in which he asserted that besides Chihuahua and Sonora, that Zacatecas, and a part of Coahuila, Carranza's native state, had joined the uprising, was received here as follows:

"In view of the attitude of Venustiano Carranza, which has been the cause of great injuries to our country, and since he could never govern a republic nor make happy a country which aspires to a real democracy, a country which wants to have a government emanating from the people subject to an interpretation of the national feelings, we have been obliged to renounce him as commander-in-chief of the Constitutional army, in charge of the executive power, and we have declared hostilities, being disposed to fight until the last, until he is forced to abandon his power and place the same in the hands of the real representatives of the people, who are disposed to remedy all evils of the republic and to direct it through the proper road of progress and well-being.

"We are not in favor of personalities, but we are defenders of principles, and consequently, we will not fight against other of the chiefs who have contributed to the downfall of the Venustiano Carranza, our difficulties being against the person of Venustiano Carranza. The states of Sonora, Zacatecas, and a part of Coahuila have seconded us to the present our attitude, and shortly we will be joined by adherents from other localities. General Obregon will leave tonight for El Paso, Texas.

(Signed) "FRANCISCO VILLA."

All available troops under Villa's command were rushed tonight to meet what was reported as a strong force of Carranza troops moving north from Coahuila. Even the two brigades which were sent on an overland march into Sonora to assist the Maytorena revolt, were recalled hurriedly. They passed through Juarez tonight on their way back to Chihuahua City, Villa's capital.

Felix Diaz Active.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 23.—General Felix Diaz, accompanied by several close friends and political associates, arrived here unexpectedly tonight. He is traveling incognito and declined to see representatives of the press.

Pedro del Villar, secretary of the National Diaz party in Mexico, who is accompanying General Diaz, declared his chief was expecting telegraphic advices which would determine his future actions.

If advised it is safe, he said, General Diaz would return to Mexico.

Francisco Carbajal, former provisional president of Zacatecas, who came here recently to resign, left hurriedly tonight for San Antonio.

Carranza Statement.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—After receiving a long message from General Carranza, President Wilson, secretary of the constitutionalist army, the Mexican ambassador, authorized the following statement:

"Contrary to Villa's denial that he had arrested General Obregon, who had gone to Chihuahua on a special invitation from Villa himself, the latest official reports received from Mexico City this afternoon by the Constitutionalist agency make clear that he is still being held in the territory controlled by Villa's forces.

"In view of this unjustifiable act on Carranza's part, Carranza's press organ is endeavoring to prevent the railroad from carrying orders to discontinue temporary

For Convention Control.

Well informed officials seemed to think the cause of the rupture between Carranza and Villa was the latter's disapproval of Carranza's system of representation for the national convention. Villa was determined that his followers should control the convention or he would not participate in it. By the agreement of Torreón which was signed by Carranza and Villa, was adjusted, one delegate was to represent every one thousand men in the army and governors of the states were to be barred. Carranza recently invited the governors and the generals as well. Villa believed the convention would do in the present emergency was not clear tonight. There was confidence among some officials that the friction would not result in a second revolution because of the strength of Villa's army. They thought a compromise might be arranged by further conferring and it was not certain whether the United States would use its influence or await developments.

War Situation Unchanged

Again the status of the warfare on the long line in France remains unchanged according to the official report of the French war office.

The battle has developed into a war of attrition, with the allies in the role of attackers against the strongly entrenched positions of the Germans. The French report says that in these circumstances, progress, must of necessity, be slow.

In the eastern war zone, the Russians report that they are still pursuing the retreating Austrians in Galicia, while on the German front, the German and Russian armies are in close contact. No engagement has occurred as yet, however.

A press dispatch says the Serbians have retaken Lubovia from the Austrians, and that the losses were heavy.

A news agency dispatch is authority for the statement that the Germans have entrenched and mined the approaches to Brussels and also are fortifying the region around Ath, northwest of Mons, to prevent the Belgians falling on the Germans, should a retreat from France be forced.

In reply to Germany's protest against China's violation of neutrality by permitting Japanese troops to land on her soil, China said she was unable to defend her neutrality.

A German official report says the Russians lost in the battles near Tannenberg 150,000 men killed and 20,000 captured.

Another German report says that a single German submarine sank the three British cruisers in the North sea Tuesday. While the location of this daring torpedo attack has not been definitely established, it is assumed that took place somewhere off the mouth of the Kiel canal.

The latest estimate of the casualties in the catastrophe gives about 1400 of the 2300 officers and men on board the three warships as lost.

British aeroplanes have invaded Germany and dropped bombs on Zappell airship hangar at Dusseldorf. The Germans claim no damage was done.

An official statement issued in Berlin says that the German Art Commission for Belgium reports that all art works and monumental buildings in Louvain were saved during the recent bombardment.

A Venetian dispatch says the Hungarian minister of war reports there have been nine cases of Asiatic cholera among the wounded in Hungary.

According to a dispatch received from Paris, a Russian cruiser has sunk a German cruiser and two German torpedo boats in the Baltic sea.

BRITISH AVIATORS MAKE LONG FLIGHT INTO MID GERMANY

Drop Bombs Into Zeppelin Sheds at Dusseldorf—Damage Not Ascertained

LONDON, Sept. 24, 12:20 a. m.—An Antwerp dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company gives additional details of the British aviation raids. It seems that the expedition was divided into two parts, one with Cologne as its objective, the other Dusseldorf.

Because of the mist, the Cologne expedition failed, but the other flew over the Zeppelin sheds at Dusseldorf, throwing down a number of bombs. While the extent of the damage is not definitely known, all the projectiles were disposed of and it is believed they inflicted extensive injury, without the aviators being disturbed.

The raiders were conveyed by Belgian automobiles and flew at a height of about a thousand feet. These facts were given out by the chief of the British aviation squadron.

LONDON, Sept. 22, 2:10 p. m.—The battle of the Aisne seems to be waning on the outcome of the allied forces' attempt to outflank the German right wing. At any rate, the French official report, issued this afternoon, while it speaks of an advance made by the allies left in the region of Lassigny, an unofficial report says that this advance was one of eighteen kilometers (about twelve miles), simply records the repulse of several violent attacks by the Germans and the fact that elsewhere the situation remains unchanged. Military experts, however, warn the public not to ignore the German efforts to force the French barrier chain at its more available points.

"It requires a lot of patience to wait for the result of this battle, but as confident are the British and French that their armies will be successful that they are not much worried.

In Galicia the Russians are pushing steadily on to their goal, which for the moment is Przemyśl. They apparently have placed pretty well surrounded by now, for following the capture of Jaroslaw, they announce today the occupation of Wolok, a town on the Hungarian border southwest of Przemyśl, and an important station on the railway which runs from Sanok through one of the passes of the Carpathians to Zamplyna and thence to Budapest.

Within probably was taken by that part of the Russian army which advanced from Lemberg by the southern route to cut off the retreat of the Austrian army through the Carpathians. It is not known whether the Russians are in the chain which the Austrians are drawing around the fortresses of Przemyśl and Cracow.

On the German frontier the Russians are in close touch with the German forces, according to their report, but no fighting has occurred.

New Serbian Success.

The Serbians record almost daily successes. This time it is the capture of Lubovia on the River Drina.

The event of the day has been the flight of British naval aeroplanes from Dusseldorf, approximately a distance of 200 miles, in the course of which they dropped bombs on the Zeppelin sheds of the German aerial fleet, which would co-operate with the German navy in case of a raid on England.

The official bureau intimates that the flight was undertaken as a warning to the Germans that if more bombs are dropped on any unfortified towns in Belgium or France, the allies can retaliate. It is quite likely that the warning is also intended to include London, which has been looking for a visit from the Zeppelins for some days.

The flight of the British aeroplanes was one, so far as distance is concerned, that they were quite used to, as for some time the British flying men have been plying from Montrose, Scotland to Salisbury, which is about the same distance as the round trip between Antwerp and the Rhine fortresses.

Refugees from Cruisers.

It has not been possible as yet to make up the rolls of the losses occasioned by the sinking of the British cruisers. Aboukir, Hogue and Crescy, by German submarines, but thus far, out of 2,220 officers and men on the ships, 1,067 have been accounted for and it is hoped that travelers and other vessels will bring a more survivors.

The landing of some of the survivors in Holland has raised the interesting question as to whether they must be interned until after the war. It has been taken for granted that this would be the case, but the point is now brought forward that they are really shipwrecked sailors and are entitled to the hospitalities of a neutral country as such until they are ready to return to their own country.

A similar case arose at Constantinople during Japan's attack on Port Arthur. A number of Japanese whose ships were sunk at Port Arthur were brought to the Chinese port and the Russian consul asked that they be interned. They finally were allowed, however, to return to Japan.

Another batch of German prisoners arrived in England today. They were taken to Canterbury, where since Friday, 1,067, including 300 Imperial German prisoners have been brought in.

The Austrian losses are even heavier than those of the German and the allies. Up to September 11, according to Russian papers, the Russians have captured seven Austrian flags, 635 guns, 44 machine guns and 64,000 prisoners, including 537 officers.

It is announced by the Newcastle Coal Exchange that owing to the inability of the German coal owners to execute the contract for supplying the Portuguese railways, the contractors have reverted to British colliers. This is the first report since the outbreak of the war of the diversion of business from Westphalia to this country.

Baron Lovat, late lieutenant-colonel commanding the Highland territorial command brigade, has been granted the temporary rank of lieutenant-general and the Duke of Marlborough, that of lieutenant-colonel.

DYSPEPSIA

Means difficult digestion, and the only way to get rid of it is to give vigor and tone to the stomach and whole digestive system. The best remedy to tone up the stomach is Dr. A. C. Smith's, which cleans out the improperly digested food, clears the bowels and liver, regulates the action of the entire intestinal tract, and in consequence tones up and strengthens the entire system. Dr. A. C. Smith does not merely cleanse out the system of all disease breeding matter, but helps every organ of the body to adjust itself to its normal condition. In this way it removes the cause of gas in the stomach, headache, nervousness, dyspepsia and indigestion. Its beneficial effects follow a single dose. Improvement begins immediately. Sample free at

INTENSE ITCHING AND BURNING

Of Eczema. Like Hives All Over Body. Also On Face and Ear. Lost Much Sleep. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed Completely.

617 N. Gibbs St., Pomona, Cal.—"My eczema began when I was five years old. It started like hives all over my body and later it troubled me principally on my face and left ear. It was very rough and red and the itching and burning were so intense that I lost much sleep. I tried several kinds of salves and blood medicines but to no avail. I had been bothered with eczema for over eight years. Then I bought two cakes of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. When finished with them my cure was complete." (Signed) Miss Mildred Sweet, Mar. 6, 1914.

Samples Free by Mail

For pimples and blackheads the following is the most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. As other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath to assist in preventing inflammation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads and other unsightly conditions of the skin. Although Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists everywhere, a sample of each with 32-p. Skin Book will be sent free upon request. Address "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

One Heroic Death.

ANGLOISME, via Bordeaux, Sept. 23, 5:10 p. m.—The family of Major C. Dupont of the artillery, has received news of his heroic death in a recent battle. With a regiment of 700 men strong, he received orders to take a position in a meadow near a town. There was a dense fog at the time, through which ominous rumblings were heard, but Major Dupont's instructions were urgent. All his men stood at their posts waiting. Suddenly the fog lifted and revealed a company of German quick-firers within 100 yards of the French position. In a few seconds, all except two officers and thirty men had fallen before the storm of shots.

Aid From India.

LONDON, Sept. 23, 10:20 p. m.—Offers of assistance from the many Indian states continue to pour in. The viceroy reports that contingents of the Imperial service troops already have been accepted from fifteen states and that similar offers from ten other states will be accepted in the near future. The joint officers of the other states, the viceroy adds, is under consideration.

The tribesmen of Kurram and Swat valley are anxious to participate in behalf of the empire, while various Maharajas and the Arab chiefs in the Aden Hinterland have expressed their loyalty and desire to be of service. The Maharaja of Gwalior has donated $100,000 for motor cars and transports and $25,000 for the relief of the Belgian sufferers.

Greek Reservists Sail.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Seven hundred Greek reservists sailed tonight for Piræus on the Greek liner Athina. Greece about a fortnight ago sent out a call for reservists in this country through her consul-general here.

The only big steamship to dock its passengers here from Europe was the White Star liner Olympic from Liverpool, which brought 2,053 persons in cabin and steerage, the French steamship Virginie reached yesterday late tonight from Bordeaux.

100,000 Unemployed.

VENICE, via Paris, Sept. 21, 2:20 a. m.—Reliable reports from semi-official sources estimate the number of unemployed in Vienna at between 90,000 and 100,000. Hundreds more are still coming in from the country districts, in spite of official warning that no labor is needed in the capital.

A proportionately large number of unemployed are to be found in the chief provincial cities. The problem of sheltering and feeding them is causing serious trouble to the local authorities. Conditions are expected to grow worse at the approach of winter. Disturbances are feared, because the bulk of the population have been drafted into the army.

1400 Men Were Lost.

LONDON, Sept. 23, 2:41 p. m.—A Harwin dispatch says that it is learned from reliable sources that the death toll of the British cruisers Aboukir, Hogue and Crescy will be about 1,400. "Somebody" says that the disaster happened in so brief a period of time it seemed like a nightmare. One of the crew of the Aboukir said he was in the water for about four hours. In his opinion, all the men between decks must have gone down with the ship. He thought that for the past three weeks the submarines of the enemy had been observing the cruisers, waiting for a fine day to risk a torpedo shot at them. They must have known that the cruisers were patrolling the same waters for weeks, and seeing the opportunity, grasped it.

The cutter Steward of the Hogue was on the deck when he heard an explosion and saw the Aboukir with a decided list. In a few moments the sea was dotted with heads. The Hogue had just lowered her anchor when she received a blow which shook the ship, her stern seeming to go down. Then a periscope was seen, traveling very quickly and the bow gun fired at it.

The periscope disappeared, but whether the submarine descended or her own will or received her quarters, he did not know.

At that moment the Hogue received another shock and began to reel over. Within a quarter of an hour, the waves were washing about their feet and Captain Nicholson sank out: "Every man for himself."

At once all lived overboard. From the water they saw the captain standing on the bridge and gave him a cheer.

GUERRILLA EXECUTED.

NAGO, Sonora, Mexico, Sept. 23.—Cayetano Montenegro, the guerrilla leader who had been active in the district, several days ago and was executed, was executed here today. The execution was public. A large assembly saw the guerrilla face a firing squad before a blank wall.

ANTI-TRUST BILL GIVEN FINAL CONFERENCE APPROVAL

Ready for Action After Many Months of Consideration

SENATE TO VOTE

Jail for Directors of Certain Companies
That Do Wrong

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The Clayton anti-trust bill, second of the administration trust legislative measures, is at last ready for final consideration of Congress after many months of deliberation in both houses. Conferees agreed upon their final report today, completing a measure that is a combination of features of both Senate and House bills.

Primarily the bill would, as suggested by President Wilson, provide that any director, officer or agent of a corporation violating the anti-trust laws of who might add or counsel such violation should be deemed guilty of misdemeanor punishable by a fine not exceeding $5,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

Important changes made in the measure as it left the Senate relate to interlocking directorates and exclusive contracts. The conferees restored the House provision prohibiting interlocking directorates of bank directors, with an amendment to provide:

"That from and after two years fol-

ADMINISTRATION BILL IS PASSED TO SENATE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The administration bill providing for a federal system of leasing public lands containing oil, phosphate, potash, sulfur and sodium, passed the House today. The bill is pending in the Senate.

Following the passage of the act, no person shall at the same time be a director or officer of any of the following: any bank, banking association, or trust company, which has deposits, capital, surplus and undivided profits aggregating more than $100,000, the provision to be applicable only to banks in cities having population of more than 200,000.

Capital Limit.

The House bill fixed the capital limitation at $2,500,000 and contained no population limitation. Interlocking also would be prohibited of directors in competitive corporations having a capital of more than $1,000,000, if elimination of the competition would constitute a violation of the trust laws. Railroad directors would be prohibited from serving as directors of corporations dealing with securities in excess of $50,000 a year, except through competitive bidding under regulation of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The provision to prevent exclusive or "tying" contracts, follows the spirit of the Walsh amendment to maintain independence of retail dealers. It would make it unlawful to lease or make a sale or contract for sale of goods, patented or unpatented, on the condition, agreement, or understanding that the lessee or purchaser shall not use or deal in goods of a competitor of the lessor, when the effect of such a transaction may substantially lessen competition, or tend to create monopoly. Specific penalty in this section of the Senate bill was eliminated.

Price discrimination between purchasers would be prohibited by the bill and holding companies would be prohibited when acquisition of corporations by another would create monopoly or "substantially lessen" competition.

Exemptions. Labor, agricultural and fraternal organizations are exempted from the law, and labor is declared not to be a commodity.

A provision growing out of the New Haven railroad difficulties would make it a felony for any officer or director of a corporation to willfully misapply its funds, or willfully permit them to be misapplied. This is made punishable by a fine of not less than $500, or by imprisonment for not less than one year, or more than ten years, or both.

Provisions modifying the liberalizing of the injunction laws were retained practically as agreed upon in the Senate and trial by jury is provided in cases of indirect contempt.

Several Senate amendments were eliminated. One of these would have given the courts authority to appoint receivers for convicted corporations to sell the property to persons who would restore competition.

Senator Culberson submitted the conference report to the Senate late today, giving notice that he would call it up at the earliest opportunity.

FREIGHTER IS SOLD

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 23.—Through Harold Ebb, San Francisco agent of the German Kormos line, it was learned today that the freighter Alexandria of 3,467 tons has been sold to Philip Thayer of this city and will be transferred immediately to American register. The Alexandria has been lying idle at Sausalito since the war broke out, and it is said that negotiations for the sale of the Kormos liner Serapis, also at Sausalito, are on foot.

ROOSEVELT ON TOUR IN IOWA

Points Out Difficulties of Progressives in Republican Party

DES MOINES, Iowa, Sept. 23.—"My main plea to you here in Iowa is that you vote as you really think, and do not permit yourselves to be led by the names of parties," Colonel Theodore Roosevelt said to his hearers at a meeting of Progressives here tonight. "As at present controlled and managed, the Democratic and Republican parties are as poor instruments with which to work out the welfare of the country as were the Democratic and Whig parties 40 years ago, when the Republican party was first founded. Abraham Lincoln was then a man of middle age and all his lifelong had been a Whig. He found that he could be true to the principles which had made him a Henry Clay Whig only by refusing longer to be fettered by allegiance to a party name. He left the party with which for a quarter of a century he had been identified and which had elected him to office and he joined the new party—the Progressive party of that day."

"For the first six years of its existence, the then Progressive party, the Republican party, had to struggle with all the difficulties with which the Progressive of this time is now struggling."

On Wrong Track.

"Senator Cummins and those who train with him are on the wrong track. They can not be true to the old time principles of Lincoln and Lincoln's day as long as they continue their association with the utterly reactionary machine as now controlled in the nation and in the largest and most populous states."

"Mr. Cummins and the Republicans who think as he does, really stand in absolute alliance with those in control of the present Democratic party and with the National Democratic administration as far as the tariff and the trust questions."

Roosevelt discussed the tariff question at some length, criticizing the policies of both the Democratic and Republican parties.

Not Amount of Business.

"The slightest study of our industrial situation," he said, "will show you that the evils that can properly be charged to the trusts may also be properly charged to corporations, and do not have 25 per cent or even 10 per cent, and sometimes not 5 per cent, of the total business. The most striking example is one that is before our eyes at this moment. The corporation which has caused most industrial trouble in this country during the past year is the Colorado Fuel & Iron company."

"This corporation has brought civil war, social war, on the state of Colorado and has paralyzed the state government which has had to appeal to the nation and invoke the protection of the United States army in order to restore the ordinary conditions of orderly civilization. Yet this corporation has not 25 per cent—probably has not 10 per cent—of mass control over the commodities in which it deals."

Mr. Roosevelt said the Progressive party advocated the creation of an efficient administration commission which shall take continuing control of trusts and which will give honest men safety as to the law and encouragement while they obey the law."

SPROULE TESTIFIES IN UNMERGER SUIT

Says Eastern Lines Try to Route Through Chicago

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Most of the Eastern railroads try to put their California traffic through Chicago, and this route augments the business of the Central Pacific Railroad, according to testimony given today by William Sproule, president of the Southern Pacific Company, in the government suit to compel the Southern Pacific Company to give up control of the Central Pacific Railway.

Government counsel attempted to draw from Sproule an admission that the Western roads decided, without consulting the shipper, what line should handle the Eastern freight.

"No discrimination is made against the shipper," replied the witness. "His freight is sent over any route he may wish, and if no road is mentioned, the freight is invariably sent over the road which benefits the shipper most, such as the quickest time in transit and the best road for his particular brand of freight."

A question as to whether competition would be reduced by single control of the Central Pacific and Southern Pacific road brought forth strong objection from J. P. Blair, Southern Pacific counsel. Sproule replied that the Central Pacific is only one of a great road, and not a through line like the Southern Pacific road. When asked regarding the various kinds of freight carried over the Southern Pacific, Central Pacific and Union Pacific, he stated that freight does not differ much on the Pacific lines.

WAR BRUTAL SAYS GOMPERS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 23.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in addressing the convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America today, said the present European war is "the most brutal and unholy war in the history of mankind."

Gompers praised the work of Congress during the present administration, calling attention to the legislation enacted and proposed, which he said protected workers and improved working conditions. Routine work of the convention was interrupted by the death of I. S. Fitzgerald, one of the Boston delegates.

PINCHOT ESTATE

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—The will of the estate of Mrs. Mary Eno Pinchot, who died on August 25 at Saukettuck, Conn., was filed today for probate. The estate is estimated at about $1,142,000. Mrs. Pinchot's sons, Clifford Pinchot of Milford, Pa., and Anne H. Pinchot of New York, each receive $325,000 and interest from July 1, 1900, and one-third of the residuary estate. The remaining one-third goes to her daughter, Annetta Johnston of London, England.

AS TO FREDERICKS

United States Senator John D. Works, who, as is well known, opposed the formation of the Progressive party and has persisted even to the limit of truculence in remaining in the Republican party, has nevertheless come out in a strong statement in favor of Governor Johnson, and against Candidate Fredericks and his reactionary associates. In a statement to the San Diego Sun, Senator Works referred to the keynote speech of Candidate Fredericks in San Diego as "an annoying performance, to those who know the political record of John D. Fredericks, his connection with and support of the old Southern Pacific machine and his opposition to most if not all of the reforms to which in that speech he rendered a tardy tribute of acceptance." If those reforms "had been left to the mercy of such Republicans as John D. Fredericks and the reactionary wing of the Republican party that is now seeking restoration to power, these great reform measures would never have become a part of the laws of California. If he were elected governor with a reactionary legislature to do his bidding he would if he dared, repeal the direct primary, the initiative, the referendum and the recall. He is opposed to them all."

Senator Works also brings out a point to which, so far as we know no one has yet called attention, and that is that neither in the so-called Republican platform nor in the speeches of Captain Fredericks is there a single word to indicate personal approval of the Progressive measures. It is not stated that these measures are good measures, but it is stated that they were passed by the Republican party and this party claims the credit for them. Senator Works, who is himself a Republican, says that "This is true only in a Pickwickian sense. The party that is now aiding the suffrages of the people with Fredericks at its head was and is now hostile to them." "We owe it to the Republican party, to the state and to the nation to free the party from reactionary and corrupt boss rule by the defeat of Fredericks. The only way this can be done now is by supporting Johnson."

It is notorious that opinions in California in regard to the personality and record of Senator Works differs very widely, but there is no difference of opinion regarding his cleanness of intellect and positiveness of conviction. Neither can there be any difference of opinion as to the loyalty to the Republican party of a man who remained faithful to it even when to do so separated him from his own political associates and from the major part of those to whom he owed his election. Unquestionably in his attitude toward Governor Johnson, Senator Works represents what is now the actual position of the progressive majority of the rank and file of the Republican registration, and he has fortunately the art of expressing that opinion more clearly and logically than most of his associates. He has moreover, the advantage with respect to Fredericks of spending with a long and intimate acquaintance with Captain Fredericks' personality and his record.

NOT A COMMODITY

The new anti-trust law is open to many criticisms, theoretical and practical, and even the exemption of farmers' organizations and labor unions from its provisions is a confession that it is a wrong law. If the things forbidden by this law are wrong, then they are wrong, no matter who does them. To allow certain popular and privileged classes to do them is to concede that they are not unconditionally wrong. The right sort of an anti-trust law would not need to have any exceptions. The things which it is right to permit organizations of farmers and laborers to do ought not to be prohibited to others, either, but they ought to be under such regulations, no matter by whom done, as to prevent them from being used harmfully against the public.

But in one declaration intended to justify and protect this exception the proposed law does enunciate an important and fundamental truth. That truth is that labor is not a commodity. Labor, to be sure, is bought and sold. But the man who buys labor does not own it after he buys it, and the man who sells labor cannot wholly separate it from his own inalienable personality. Labor is not a commodity. Labor is life; labor is the contribution of each man to the social product. As society is now organized, the most effective method for most persons to make their labor useful to the community and profitable to themselves is to enter into contracts to work for wages. Such contracts constitute a business obligation on the part of the laborer to render good and faithful services, and on the part of the employer to pay wages in full and promptly and to provide decent treatment and proper facilities for work and life. This is a business arrangement, but it is not a purchase and the obligation entered into is not a commodity. This principle has been familiar to thinking men for many years, but it is well to have it affirmatively declared in positive law.

MAY STAY NOW

Verily the way of Mexico is hard. No sooner is Carranza safely installed in the Mexican capital and orders issued to the American troops at Vera Cruz to prepare for withdrawal, than a new counter-revolution is proclaimed, this time under General Villa, the most forceful man and the most directly representative of the Mexican people that this revolution has yet developed. Villa, to be sure, is a brute, a savage and a brigand, but these qualities are regarded as virtues by his followers, and he unquestionably represents the genuine sentiment of the people of at least northern Mexico. Government by Villa would doubtless come nearer to actual government by the people of Mexico than government by any other person in Mexico. And there is no such thing as government in Mexico except by the personal domination of some dictator. What is even more to the point, a revolution by Villa will get followers and can make trouble. Villa even as President of Mexico might not be able to pacify Mexico, but Villa as an insurgent can permanently unpacify Mexico, and he has now announced his intention of doing so.

This means probably that American troops will not get out of Vera Cruz. It means certainly that if they were to get out they would have to go back again, and it means, unfortunately for Mexico, though doubtless fortunately for the United States, that if American troops do remain in Vera Cruz or return there, they are exceedingly unlikely to go beyond Vera Cruz. If General Villa shall succeed in stirring up chaos once more in Mexico, he will justify American intervention and will produce a situation in which American intervention would be the only hope of Mexico. But in the present condition of Europe and in the present state of American sentiment, America will not intervene in Mexico, even if it should become our duty to do so. We are going to have peace at any price, even that of ignominiously shirking a duty. Mexico will have to work out its own salvation under a policy of watchful waiting. That policy may not have been very wise when it was adopted, but it is absolutely imperative now, and American sentiment will demand its continuance regardless of the consequences to Mexico. It is a pity for Mexico, but doubtless it is a good thing for us that the world has now given us a good excuse for stubborn selfishness.

Consuls as Aids to Educators

The several departments at Washington do more and better team work than they used to do. The interplay begins with the cabinet members who lead the several staffs. It continues to the subordinates. The consequence is, we find, a much more effective and positive administrative policy than the capital has known for some time. The people who vote, who pay the taxes and who decide upon national policies consequently are more informed than this butane of the administrative technique is contributing to their welfare. It not only is making them richer in trade and stronger in a world sense, but also better informed as to the intellectual and civic evolution of other lands. The outlook and scope of the diplomatic and consular officials, for instance, is much extended by changes that have been wrought within the department of state during the last decade; and the consequence is that the information respecting the world which is now available through the reports sent back by the consuls is as varied as it is reliable. For this reason many persons now take the series of reports as published finding the process educational and valuable for business or professional reasons.

Consuls cover the entire fields of action and thought not formerly commented on by them. Thus the bureau of education has just borne public testimony to the worth of the material relative to contemporary educational evolution in Europe, South America and Asia which the consuls send back and which in time finds general recognition through special literature sent forth by the bureau to picked educators throughout the country. Not every consular agent of the United States is fitted to serve the country in that he would call extensive vocational fields, where consuls are competent they must, we think, welcome the opportunity to send back home information about schools and colleges which in due time finds its way to teachers and serves as a corrective or an impetus.—Christian Science Monitor.

MOVIE GUN SHOTS THREE

Frederic Sullivan, director of a motion picture concern, was struck on the forehead by a double-barrel shotgun that recoiled while he was directing a photo drama here. He was taken to his home in South First Avenue in a dazed condition and it is feared his skull is fractured. Miss Rene Harrington, actress, and Albert Mayo, assistant director, were hit by buckshot from the gun. Their wounds were dressed by a surgeon. The "property" gun was loaded to a chair and pointed at Miss Harrington by Justice Barnes at Williamsbridge, an actor, who then set a candle to burn a cord that released a pair of springs operating the triggers. This scene was to be a thriller in a film production. The gun was discharged prematurely.—New York Sun.

 Civilization

Civilization is a handsome garment which man wears with pride during peace and which he pulls off and hangs on a nail when he indulges in war. Civilization is the cultivation of arts, including that of humanity and unselfishness. When a country is civilized it spends more on music than it does on vice, and it is so careful of life that a few murderers live long enough to have their death sentences confirmed by the highest court. Civilization rejoices in the happiness of the humblest man, and goes out of its way to protect dumb animals. Then in the midst of peace war is declared and the nation which has been shuddering under the necessity of hanging the poor wretch who has just murdered his family leaps to arms with a shout and sets out to make life one long funeral procession for its neighbor.

The man who beat his son yesterday for pulling the cat's tail, spends today shooting at the father of seven small children and when he hits him in the chest he shouts with triumph and sings his nation's hymn. The man who gave money yesterday to help a widow buy bread will go through the enemies' fields with a torch tomorrow and reflects with pride upon the fact that when he is through burning the crops the children of that country will have to get across the winter. And the citizen whose hand leaped to his pocket to feed the hungry last month will take a large, sharp sabre next week and cut that citizen in two above the watch pocket without a word.

pulmonary treatment before it can relieve sufficiently to keep the killing of children from being looked upon as just. Civilization has made this world endurable and it is the one thing which should not be given a vacation—even if we have to abandon war to keep it at work.

The Great Trials of History

TRIAL OF JAMES HARRINGTON

Sooner than pass his life away in one prison or another, Sir James Harrington, when in prison at Plymouth for endeavoring to change the form of government, at the advice of a friend, drank gunpowder in such quantities, it is said, as to injure his health, and finally disorder his brain. He was released and allowed to go to London for medical advice, but he was never quite cured.

On a dark December morning in the year of the Restoration a certain Captain Short knocked at the door of a robber named Lugard. He demanded a man within who gave him money as "Edwards" and whom Short said was Sir James Harrington. The robber gave him and guaranteed that the prisoner would be at his house within call but in the morning, when the rogues returned the birds were flown. From this time on nothing was seen of either Harrington's property was confiscated and he himself sank from public view. But only for a time, for a year later he blossomed forth as Sir James Harrington, supposed to be a second cousin to Sir James. He wrote a good many books, one "Oceana," a satire on the ruling of the Commonwealth of "England by Cromwell. Some of the dignitaries at London suppressed it, but Cromwell, after reading it, said he saw nothing wrong in it and so it was published. During the confusion that followed Cromwell's death, Harrington formed a club, called the Rota, to discuss the introduction of his political schemes.

ward Walker, to examine the philosopher. After a rigorous cross-examination, which consisted mainly of defining with whom Harrington was friends and with whom he associated, the councilors knew just as much as when they began, and it was with a sense of failure at not having implicated him in some outbreak or plot that they returned to "business." For five months the poor idealist lay a prisoner ere he thought of asking for his right of trial from the High Court of Parliament. In the meanwhile, Lady Ashton was trying in every way to regain Harrington's freedom. The King referred her to his Council and the Council to the King. She then applied to the courts (Continued on Page 6.)

SOCIETY

An out-of-town wedding that is of much interest to Fresnoans was celebrated yesterday at high noon at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. S. W. Benninger, of Madera, when Mrs. Sue Mallory and J. Walter Schmitt were principals in a pretty marriage service.

A nuptial shower of creamy yellow blossoms, fast contracting greenery made an effective background for the bridal party, that included Miss Samarat Fletcher as maid-of-honor, and Brooks Merced as best man. The service was read by Father Kins.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served, the same duty color scheme being carried out in the decorations of the dining room. Later the bride and groom left on a north-bound train for San Francisco, where the honeymoon will be spent. The groom comes of a pioneer family of the San Joaquin Valley and is very well known, and his attractive bride has endeavored herself to a large number of friends since coming from Virginia several years ago.

Misses Martha and Julia Harris are to give their very delightful "Evening in the Sunny South" on Friday evening in Dinuba. The charming list of favorite Southern songs and instrumental numbers and the attractiveness of the costumes is a most appealing combination that has won favor in many of the adjacent Valley cities, as well as in Fresno.

Miss Helen Rogers is having a most delightful visit with relatives in Kentucky. Miss Rogers and her mother, Mrs. L. R. Rogers, spent the latter part of the summer in Salt Lake City, their former home, where a royal reception was accorded them by their numerous friends there. Later Miss Rogers went on East for a several months' sojourn, and Mrs. Rogers is now spending some weeks in Los Angeles.

The Thursday Night class, which has for several years been one of the most delightful study classes ever which Mrs. W. P. Miller has presided, will reconvene next Thursday evening, the first Thursday in October being the signal for the season's work to begin. An innovation is to be established this year in the classes, two different courses being planned, with two nights of Shakespeare's English history plays each month alternating with that number of modern dramas. The arrangement is for the benefit of the students who have already taken the course in the English history plays.

Another class is to be arranged for, and prospective members are to assemble on the evening of October 2nd at Mrs. Miller's to form the club. This is being done in response to repeated demands on the part of members of the young married set, who have desired a "men and women's club." The days of Brown, Macmillan, Hauptmann, Bernard Shaw, the American dramatists and later English writers will be given at intervals of two weeks during the winter.

After spending a delightful year's sojourn on the islands of Oahu, Kauai and Hawaii, Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Kinsley will return to Fresno, sailing on the S. S. Matsonia which left Honolulu yesterday.

Among the visitors in town expected shortly is Mrs. Emil Kehrlein, Jr., (Mary O'Brien) of San Francisco, who will be the guest of her sister, Mrs. William G. Wharton and Mrs. C. H. Staples, during her sojourn here. As this is Mrs. Kehrlein's first visit since her marriage, there will doubtless be a number of complimentary affairs given for the attractive young matron.

Mrs. Carl Linsley returned last night from San Francisco, where she has been spending several weeks.

A congenial group of young business men are planning a very delightful little dancing party for Saturday evening, when the pavilion at Fresno Beach will be the setting for the informal gathering.

A very happy surprise party was that arranged in compliment to Miss Maude Phelan on Tuesday evening, the affair being a welcome home from her extended summer outing. The J. C. Phelan home on Fortieth avenue is well adapted for the occasion, and the affair being a welcome home from her extended summer outing. The J. C. Phelan, Adeline Klein, Florence Mayer, Nadine Sparkman, Audrey Brooks, Lester Sparkman, Alma Jensen, Margaret Simpson, Elsa Burdette, Addie Hall, Lorna Laval, Gertrude Jenkins.

Mrs. Fred Hunsicker and son, Ernest, and Mrs. E. Ellert, who have been enjoying a three-months' trip in the East, visiting relatives in Wisconsin, Chicago and Davenport, Iowa, are expected to return home this week.

Charles Butler has returned from a week's sojourn in San Francisco.

A called meeting of the Episcopalian Circle of St. Paul's M. E. church will be held on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the church parlors. All members are urged to be present.

Misses Ruth Swearingen and Eunice Wilson, of Topeka, Kansas, are house guests of Misses Ethel Kahnt, at her home 1250 Elmhurst.

Mrs. George Weitz is spending a month in Los Angeles as the guest of her sister, Mrs. Clark Johnson.

Miss Agnes Graff, has as her house guest, Miss Nina Greenwood of Nevada.

The Degrees of Honor Club held a very pleasant meeting on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. C. Phelan, on Fortieth avenue. Following the usual card games, prizes were awarded to Miss Florence Hill, Mrs. Hill, and Mrs. Fine. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the afternoon.

Mrs. George Drater, entertained on Tuesday evening at her home on West and Washington avenues, in celebration of her birthday anniversary. Dancing and games provided entertainment during the evening hours, and later a birthday feast was served.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Van Ness M. E. church will meet this afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. B. Butler, on Central avenue, at half past two.

The West Park Thursday Club will celebrate "President's Day" this afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. H. Stauch.

The City Union Christian Endeavor will hold a social this evening in the parlors of the First Presbyterian church.

The Philathea Class of St. Paul's M. E. church will meet this evening at 7 o'clock at the home of Mrs. W. T. Stauch, 150 N. Street.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist church of Rathskeller will meet with Mrs. H. D. Lloyd on Friday afternoon at half past two.

A banquet will precede an important business meeting which will be held by the Standard Bearers of the First M. E. church parlors this evening. The hour is set for 8:30, and all members are asked to attend.

Robert C. Brown, a rancher of Sultana, and Miss Bertha Huntley of Fresno were married yesterday morning at the Belmont Avenue Presbyterian manse by Rev. Duncan Wallace.

M. C. Long and Miss Lucy Fowler, both of Fresno, were married yesterday by Rev. Duncan Wallace at the Belmont Avenue Presbyterian church. The bride is well known in Fresno, being a graduate of the local high school.

of law and asked for a writ of habeas corpus, forcing the Council either to relax their grip or prove him guilty of some crime. The judges yielded, the writ went out, and then poor Lady Ashton thought her work was done and her brother saved, but in the morning news was brought to her that her brother had been spirited away in the deep of the night and carried off to gain information as to the whereabouts of her brother—to the Tower, to the Secretary of State, to the Lieutenant of the Tower. She herself called it treason, treason to snatch a man from justice, to insult his Majesty in the person of his judge, break the covenant of law. Treason of the highest class. The poor lady had with her to learn that law is not for men like Harrington. Four weeks later she received a note sent by him from a little rock near Plymouth at the Chapel of St. Nicholas.

Here it was that he took the poison, for he was forbidden to walk and forced to drink brackish water. Yet he never ceased to dream of the great Cerana of which he had written. He finally gained his point at such a cost and under security of 8000 pounds he was released. At last he was free, but he was too late. Eight weeks later he had with him to rest at the little church of St. Margaret, at the side of the grave of Sir Walter Raleigh.

LOYAL SONS TO GIVE RUBE SOCIAL

The Loyal Sons will give a "rube" social at the First Christian church next Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. Following is the program: Pottery selling, jubilee chorus, peanut auction, relay race.

What Anne Rittenhouse Says About the Styles

The Louis Sixteenth Coats, in Cloth, Are Curiously Made This Season. With More Seams Than We Have Had in Decades.

PARIS, Sept. 22. If you had the time to dissect the new coat, called Louis Sixteenth, when Madam Tchenit invented this month, it would prove an interesting study.

A well known American who bought one announced that he intended to substitute it for a picture puzzle on the home-ward trip.

Picture puzzles, by the way, have leapt back into popular favor during the war, because man, woman and child are passing together their time and placing flags are the correct position in the "zone of operations."

Children are being taught the work by their governesses, and through this, the fashion has spread. No one in America can realize the edition of the long days and nights in Paris for those who have to work to do, who cannot get home, who are stranded in a city where every avenue of amusement and recreation is closed.

As thousands here do not speak the French language, even they cannot get at the French viewpoint by conversing with the people in the streets; therefore these picture-puzzle war maps with all their little flags have proved a boon and a blessing to the idle.

Each day the papers publish a small map of the "zone of operations" of the day before, and this is planned before the puzzle. One can wander at any hour of the day into the secluded courtyards of the hotels that are filled with Americans and find them carefully at work on this one form of amusement.

Dozens of these maps will go back to America as souvenirs of one of the most terrible summers that many Americans have experienced.

The Coat With Many Seams. You see, it is hard to keep on the subject of fashions, and yet it is a safely valve to have to do it. In writing them in this corner of the boulevard with war news being cried on the streets every moment with some excitement to call one to the window every second, with this tense atmosphere in Paris pressing upon one like an iron band, one feels when writing of clothes like the woman who played solitaire when the Grand Republic was going down.

Fashions keep one's mind off the war for a few moments at a time, and as long as there are new fashions introduced by the courageous couturiers every day or so, the work of a fashion reporter is cut out for her.

Therefore, to business: there is this new coat by Cheruit. It reaches well over the knees—a fact which you already know—and it ripples from waist to hem and has a straight unbroken slim top part that flares to the skirt at every point except the waistline.

So much for the outline, but this description does not give any idea of the complicated method that has been adopted to build this coat. No American cutter will be able to achieve it without a model.

The pattern, for example, gains its flare by being built from gored sections only a few inches wide. You can imagine how many seams this makes below the waist! Then there is a seam around the hips where the full pleat is joined to the narrow upper part. As this seam does not go across the back it dips downward and makes two lines on each side of the spine.

Trimming Under the Arm. Under each arm there are from five to seven seams which have their points in large thick arrowheads of self-colored embroidery and each seam divides two narrow bias segments of the fabric, all of which runs to the pleat.

One woman likened their appearance to the steamship maps showing dotted lines and land lines which are now mere mockery. No wonder she looked at them mournfully; she had tried five steamship offices, consuming hours a day doing it, in a futile effort to get to New York.

Vegetable Lore

Cauliflower and Onions—Both cauliflower and onions in an uncovered sauceron, to make the odor as little apparent in the house as possible. Also hangs at kitchen window open at the top for a few inches. This method of ventilating carries off much of the odor.

For Whiteness—Some cooks think that a little bit of butter added to the water which cauliflower is cooked in, will make the vegetable whiter in the course of cooking.

Cucumbers—Remember that the

VERDICT GUILTY IN STABBING CASE

A jury before Judge Church yesterday found Chris Gileos guilty of stabbing Hugh Polombo in the back on August 26, in the Libby packing house at Selma. Gileos' defense was that he interfered in the defense of his younger brother, Nick, in an encounter with Polombo, and likely to be roughly dealt with as he feared. Lizzie Chinitello, also a packing house worker, was charged with Polombo as her brother-in-law, of the unwelcome and persistent attentions and letter writing of the younger Gileos. This precipitated the original encounter. Saturday was set as the time for sentence.

There Are Thousands of Men In the San Joaquin Valley who are land hungry; men who would buy land at once if they could be convinced that they were getting good land with good water rights, at a right price and upon reasonable terms. I know this to be true for I have talked to hundreds of them. These good men are hesitating to buy land because so very often they are persuaded to buy poor land with poor water rights, upon hard and unsatisfactory terms of purchase.

I come to such men, and perhaps you who are reading this are one of them, and I say to you that my land is good, the water rights are the best in the San Joaquin valley, the price is reasonable and the terms are more than reasonable for they are only one-tenth cash and one-tenth each year for nine years, the rate of interest is only six per cent. This land will all be leveled down nice and smooth, good ditches and good roads will be built to each ten-acre tract.

I am financially responsible for every word I say to you and for every word I write into the contract. You can make no mistake by buying Westacres from me. Come and see me or write me a letter.

PLAN BIG RESERVOIR FOR STORING OF OIL

Lakeview No. 2 Is Arranging for Container for 1,250,000 Barrels

MARIETTA, Sept. 23.—Many men and teams are at present engaged in building a great storage reservoir in the Lakeview No. 2 oil field. The company, which is now completing the well, will hold 1,250,000 barrels of oil, and will be used to store the oil from the Lakeview No. 2 well, which is continuing to flow at a rate of 17,000 barrels per day.

The company has at the present writing more than 2,500,000 barrels of oil in storage. This amount has been accumulated since the great well was brought in last May, in addition to which a large amount of oil has been marketed, also nearly 200,000 barrels which were destroyed by fire.

For storage, the company officials were forced to secure every available space at hand and have at this time no less than 300,000 barrels of the company's oil in storage. A 11-23, 1914, the company has at the present writing more than 2,500,000 barrels of oil in storage. This amount has been accumulated since the great well was brought in last May, in addition to which a large amount of oil has been marketed, also nearly 200,000 barrels which were destroyed by fire.

LARGE OIL SHIP VISITS THIS PORT

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 23.—The Kronprinz Wilhelm, flying the Swedish flag, and the largest motor ship in the world, recently discharged a cargo at Los Angeles, being the second motor ship to ever visit the Pacific coast. She draws 21 feet of water. She is equipped with Diesel engines and has a cargo capacity of 8,500 tons. The demand for California oil, coming with the development of the Diesel engine for ship propulsion, is said to be the motive for English capitalists investing their capital in California companies.

Oil have been treated above the amount which has been sold and this is kept on hand until the market is opened sufficiently to permit of its sale.

With the past few days, a gigantic reservoir with a capacity of 1,000,000 barrels has been rented from the Union Oil Company and at present a crew of 150 men are at work stringing a line of 6 inch pipe from the property to the reservoir which will be used to hold the oil until the great Lakeview No. 2 well is completed. The reservoir is known as the Union No. 2, and is located on section 25, of all the production from the lease, the company is only permitted to run 1000 barrels a day to the Standard, which is the purchasing company. The several treating plants are engaged treating the fluid which is about 60 per cent emulsion when it is produced by the well. Over 750,000 barrels of

HOUSE ADOPTS RAKER OIL BILL AMENDMENTS

Bill Provides for Eight Hour Labor Day and Pay in Cash

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—The house yesterday added to the Raker general leasing bill and amendment permitting leases to surrender oil and gas leases held from the government under reasonable restrictions by the Interior department. The amendment was offered by Representative Raker and was adopted by a vote of 219 to 191.

Another amendment providing that an eight hour day should prevail on leases, with twice a month pay for labor in cash, was offered by Raker and adopted by the House.

OIL DEVELOPMENT NOTES OF MIDWAY

TAFT, Sept. 23.—The work of transporting the heavy castings for the auxiliary plants of the Producers Transportation Company at Junction, Antelope, Shandon and Creston stations is being delayed because of the lack of arrival of a number of shipments. But one more load is needed to complete the plant at the Junction station. As soon as it is hauled and the shipments arrive, Lierly and Son will start work on the long heavy haul from McKittick to Antelope. Teams and trucks have been dispatched to Paso Robles, where several carloads of heavy machinery for the Shandon and Creston stations are to arrive in a few days. Indications are that it will take at least two months more to haul out all the castings for the big engines and pumps.

The old No. 3 rig on the Buena Vista division of the General Petroleum Company, on the Buena Vista anticline, on section 32, 31-23, is soon to begin a period of usefulness after standing idle for a long period. It is being moved to the Banking division, on section 36, 32-23 where it is to be used in the drilling of the No. 4 well.

The new well on the Buena Vista division, which was finished about three weeks ago, is doing in the neighborhood of 250 barrels daily.

The No. 5 well of the California Counties Oil Company on section 4, 32-23, near Fellows, is down 2575 feet with a string of 6 1/4 inch casing. A string of 6 1/4 inch casing is being awaited, so that drilling may proceed with cable tools, and the well completed into the sand.

A string of 8-inch casing is being hauled in the No. 3 well of the California Counties Oil Company in the Fellows district, on section 4, 32-23, at a depth of 2010 feet. It is then to be completed into the sand with cable tools with a string of 6 1/4 inch. The well was drilled to its present depth with a rotary under contract by the California Well Drilling Company. As this hole was spotted with a mystic wand, it is being watched closely by operators in the immediate neighborhood, that it may be determined whether or not the seer knew what he was talking about when he directed that the derrick be erected at a different location than was first decided upon.

The old Lakeview Oil Company has come to the rescue of the Lakeview No. 2 oil company and is aiding it in its storage of the great production from the No. 1 well on section 4, 11-23. The storage which was formerly used for the Lakeview No. 1 which came in four years ago, and started the world by its great flow, are to be used in the storing of the new Lakeview wonder. Stumps on both sections 33 and 34 have been leased for new storage.

Although the water was cemented off some time ago in the No. 1 well of the Wilkes Head Oil Company, on section 4, 32-23, at Fellows when the well was tested out a few days ago, it showed that it was still leaking when it had been bailed to a depth of 2100 feet. Preparations are now being made to cement again that the well may be brought in and made to produce oil and oil only. The 6-inch string has been shot off at a depth of 2145 feet and redrilling is to start at once.

A five room cottage is being moved from the E. K. D. lease to the division B camp of the Standard Oil Company. J. A. Pelter is in charge of the contract. The cottage is soon to be occupied by P. Grepe Jr. and wife. Grepe as yet is minus the wife but claims he will have one in time to set the house in order immediately after it is landed at its new location.

MINE OWNERS MUST AGREE, SAYS WILSON

Will Refuse to Consider Alternative Colorado Propositions

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—President Wilson refused today to change his attitude toward the Colorado strike situation and insisted that the mine operators must accept the basis of settlement already agreed to by the miners or stand responsible before the country for the result.

J. E. Welborn, president of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, known as the "Rockefeller property," discussed the situation with the president and told him that some of the principal points in the basis of agreement did not meet with the approval of his company. He proposed another plan of settlement, but Mr. Wilson refused to take it up.

It was said that the White House tonight that President Wilson will stand behind the original plan of settlement, which was drawn up by a mine operator and a miner named by Secretary of Labor Wilson. Welborn promised to lay the President's views before the other operators and then to send a final answer.

President Wilson has expressed his disinclination to allow federal troops to remain in the Colorado mine district much longer.

WILL USE MOVIES TO BOOST FIELD

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 23.—For a month boosters of the Lakeview No. 2 oil field are to be shown free at one of the local theaters here in order to give the men, women and children a good idea of these splendid fields and the opportunities they present. At Lakeview there are 100 producing oil wells giving 200,000 barrels of oil per month of high grade, from which the companies realize from 60 to 85 cents per barrel. Lakeview has many fine camps, the one of the Universal Oil company having the reputation of being the finest individual oil camp in the world. Teachers and school children may have special days set aside for their visits. Joseph Lamb of Lakeview is in charge of the exhibition.

OIL LITIGATION IN KERN COURTS

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 23.—The long drawn out suit of Lyman Lowell against the Consolidated Midway Oil company and others still drags its weary way, being featured yesterday by the filing of a second amended answer in behalf of Mary T. Francis, a defendant. She states that when the land in question, the northwest quarter of section 32, 12-22, was led on by the plaintiffs, it was not open, and asks that her title to this land be cleared. She says that on March 18, 1901, this land was led on as the Hermona Placer Mining claim, by Frank P. Francis, George E. Francis, Mrs. W. H. Hobbs, W. Allen, Frankie Francis, Maude Allen, Louise Francis and Albert Brown. A well—2500 feet—deep, which had a production of 50 barrels a day, was put down on this land, she says. Later, according to the answer, an adverse location was made by Lyman Lowell, James B. Stone, James Bloom, Harry V. Massena, William Kimball, Arthur Whitfield and Maude Whitfield. Matthew S. Platt is the attorney for the defendants.

Vigil Payne, who lost two fingers September 23, 1913, while drilling for the Lakeview Oil company at Marietta, claims that the injury was caused by faulty machinery, has filed a complaint against the Lakeview, asking $15,000 damages. George W. Whitaker is his attorney. Payne claims to have been almost totally incapacitated having lost the index and second fingers of his left hand.

The Petroleum Production company has decided the General Petroleum company a right of way over sections 30 and 32 of 25-22.

Pat J. O'Brien, one of the owners of the Section Twenty-five Oil company at Taft, has obtained from the United States a patent to a placer mining claim known as Del Monte No. 4, situated in the Marietta mining district, being the northern quarter of section 4, 11-23. O'Brien has also obtained title to a similar claim known as the Del Monte No. 3, in the same section.

How Thin People Can Put on Flesh

A New Discovery

Thin men and women—that big, hearty, filling dinner you are just right. What because of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folk the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and funny sawdust diet. Omit the flesh cream rub-ons. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and eat with every one of those single Sargol tablets. In two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should be the net result. Sargol charges your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food and prepares it for the blood in easily assimilated form. Thin people gain all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a scientific combination of six of the best flesh-producing elements known to chemistry. They come in tablets in a package, are pleasant harmless and inexpensive, and San Joaquin Drug Co., West Coast Inc., Patterson Block Pharmacy, and all other druggists in Fresno and vicinity sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back. —Advertisement.

Immoral Practices in Lodging House Cause of Ouster Suit

Judgment was granted yesterday by Judge Austin in the suit of Charles A. Marshall against Charlotte Cunningham, also known as Roberts and Pugh, for the cancellation of the lease at 374 monthly rental of the Sunset building house on Mariposa street over the Edie saloon. The cancellation was under the contract of the lease to keep a respectable house, Marshall claiming that liquor was sold there in violation of the city ordinance and that immoral practices were maintained. The case went by default. Marshall did not ask for damages, save for non-surrender of the premises, having refused to accept the offered rent, but prosecuted the case to ouster the tenant.

New Plan. Corns Shriveled, Vanish.
Until "GETS-IT" was born nobody was ever sure of getting rid of a corn. Corn treatments nearly all contained the same ingredients, only some were liquid, some plasters, some "wrappers" and some in salve form. Now comes "GETS-IT" with a newly discovered formula—the corn cure on a new principle and a simple plan that never fails. This is why "GETS-IT" has grown in three years to be the best-selling corn cure the world has ever known. There's no more need of fussing with corns, no more digging or cutting. There's nothing to press down on the corn, nothing to inflame the flesh, to "pull" the corn or cause pain. Put two drops of "GETS-IT" on in two seconds. That's all. For any corn, callus, wart or bunion.

FRIENDS OF CONDT ATTEND LAST RITES

Favorite Hymns and Chosen Scripture Passages Heard at Services

Numerous friends of the late Walter L. Condit, including those associated with the deceased in his work on the Fresno Morning Republican, attended the last rites performed yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The funeral party assembled at the Reul Undertaking parlors, N. and Twelfth streets, where a simple service was conducted by Rev. J. A. Wallis of St. Paul's Methodist church.

The order of service had been laid out by Mr. Condit himself early in his last illness. Mrs. W. H. Garman, accompanied by Mrs. Henry Rayson, on the organ, sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "How Walter read the Twenty-Third and Twenty-Fourth and Twenty-Fifth Psalms, and a selection from First Corinthians. He spoke feelingly of the good work done by Mr. Condit, his kindness of nature, his appreciation of the goodness of this life and yet the need of preparation of soul for the future life. He drew from the daily newspaper work of the deceased a lesson of the part that Christ has in the correction of human efforts to fit in with heavenly purposes.

On behalf of those who had worked with Mr. Condit for many years, William Glass, business manager of the Republican, spoke briefly. He said that the predominant character of the dead man had been kindness. Mr. Condit had drawn to himself all with whom he associated by his continuous consideration for the feelings of others. It was, the speaker added, a comforting exemplification of the assurance of a future life that this man had made so steady, persistent and confident preparation for coming happiness. The natural kindness of the man was borne out in his idealization of all his relationships and in his memories of childhood and earlier friends and associates.

Mrs. Garman sang, "Abide with Me," closing the services at the house. Burial took place beside the remains of Mrs. Condit, in Mountain View cemetery, where Rev. Wallis read the final scripture and said the benediction. The grave was banked high with floral tributes from friends.

EXHIBITS TO LEAVE FOR SOUTH SATURDAY

Carload Shipment of Material for San Diego
Exposition

A carload shipment of material consisting of the Valley building at the San Diego Exposition will leave Fresno Saturday morning. The car was started from Stockton yesterday and will be in Merced today, part of the load being placed aboard at each place. Saturday it will be completed here, the material from Modern, Modesto and Hanford being continued in the load with that from Fresno. Most of the stuff being placed aboard consists of Egyptian and Kaffir corn, Milo maize, mining and forestry exhibits and industrial displays. M. J. Wessells will receive the car at San Diego and will place the material in the valley building within a very short time.

DeWitt H. Gray of the Fresno county commission left last night for Los Angeles, where he will meet Wessells, and they will have a short conference and settle a number of detail matters relating to the installation of fair exhibits. —Advertisement—

OLD TREE YIELDS EXHIBIT PEACHES

Twelve dozen samples of Salway peaches cut from twenty year old trees were gathered this week by J. A. Tyler of the Panama exhibit collecting force to be placed in storage for the exposition next year. The peaches were obtained from the J. A. Dawson ranch in Enterprise, Cal., and, though large, perfect in contour, and wonderful in color, they are interesting especially for the reason that they demonstrate the fact that peach trees produce for many years, not completing their bearing time at seven years as has often been thought. Mr. Dawson has produced as high as eight picking boxes a season for a number of seasons from his trees, and this year, to be exact, picked 800 boxes from 100 trees.

IGGOROTE DOGEATERS COMING TO THE FRESNO DISTRICT FAIR

IGGOROTE TRIBE WHO WILL EAT DOG AT FRESNO FAIR

Would you like to sit down to a dog stew? That's the opportunity that you'll have when you visit the Fresno District Fair this year. They're Iggorotes from the Philippines.

piners, subjects of Uncle Sam. But they have certain dietary habits that don't conform with the best approved fashions in California. And they have certain other personal habits that might not make them the best of neighbors.

Their morals, too, are somewhat different from those that are held up to our children. While they conscientiously observe religious rites of their own, they have not the slightest compunction in taking human life. Perhaps it is just the difference in the moral concept. But they are peculiar in their likes and dislikes, to say the least about them.

In the first place they are head-hunters. In order to approach the land of his desire and youthful love, the Iggorote young man must be able to display a certain number of scalps or dried human heads as proof of his prowess. When he can make a suitable showing he is entitled to the fair one's favor and his overtures to the maiden of his choice are likely to be successful.

But that is not all. Perhaps he may have come by the heads through inheritance. They may be family heirlooms. In order to permanently establish himself in the good graces of the wife, in the eyes of his mother-in-law, and to propitiate the head-hunting brothers and cousins who might not discriminate very carefully while making up their collection, he must go out immediately, not to return until he has a nice fresh head hanging from his belt.

Dog Stew Toothsome Dainty

In the matter of the bill of fare, they offer viands which might tempt the appetite of a really hungry person, but it is doubtful whether any Fresno people will sit down with them to partake, no matter how urgent nor how courteous the invitation.

And right here it is well to mention that if the owners of pet poodles and the manager of the bench show are really prudent they will lock up their pets.

For the Iggorotes are dog-eaters! That dainty belle of the Iggorote village, Addimay, who is called Rube, just likes to sit down and munch the hind leg of someone's Fido or Nore. She is as fond of it as most people are of chicken. It is the national dish of this tribe in the Philippines, and their appetites are so well established that the manager of the Foley and Burk Shows always furnish fresh dogs. Incidentally, this little idiosyncrasy, just in the matter of appetite is not without its lucrative phase. The pound man is always glad to see the Iggorotes arrive. Twice daily they partake of dog stew, dog chowder, dog steak, roast dog or some other form of canine. Not "hot dogs," either, but genuine four-footed howlers and growlers and barkers.

But they mix religion with dog, too. The priest kills it with ceremonial rites. While they eat dog, they are particular about other kinds of meat and discriminate against pork; neither will they eat blood. This must be drained carefully from the offerings.

A part of their performance at the fair consists of their preparation and the "beef feed" on dog.

The title by which their national dish is called is highly descriptive; it is "bow-wow chow."

Rosie is Belle of Headhunters

Fat, happy Rosie, youngest and prettiest of the Iggorotes, is in a fair way to be spoiled by the attentions showered upon her. She is by all odds the favorite, and the recipient of special favors everywhere. She is the most graceful dancer. Also she has a most winning smile.

A part of the performance consists of the wild, savage music of these people. The music is furnished by the men, while the women do the dancing. Their national dance is the "gimman"; no ragging is allowed. There are four women in the village and eight men. The women are Kinahang, Luyawan, Addimay (who is also called Rosie) and Bananang.

These people show their native arts, native dances, and native customs. They come from Bengtuck, Upper Luzon, from a tribe which gave the Americans much trouble when the troops were subjugating the savage tribes.

Both the men and women are well developed physically and are surprisingly strong, and Iggorote in training being able to give a good account of himself against four white men of larger stature. They fight with spears and are astonishingly skillful, being able to hurl them great distances with a certainty of aim that is almost incredible.

Blanket weaving, basket weaving and the making of trinkets are their nearest approach to civilization, although they have a crude blast furnace for forging metals which is quite efficient, and with which they make their weapons, spear points, etc.

These Iggorotes were brought here for scientific purposes and there were charges made several months ago that they were lured to this country against their will. After these charges were aired in court, however, it was decided that they were legitimately here. They were the feature of the State Fair this year and entertained more than 15,000 people.

One of them has been a resident of this country for a number of years. He was at Paris, at St. Louis, at Seattle. During that time he has become quite fluent in the English language. He has learned to say "pigar," "eat," and several other phrases, whiskey being one of them. However, this last accom-

DR. HUNTER WRITES ON SUNDAY SCHOOL IDEA

Fresno Ministers to Promote Interest for Rally Day Next Sunday

In order to stimulate interest in the Sunday School Rally day which is to be held next Sunday, a number of local ministers have agreed to write articles on the Sunday school idea. The first of these articles, written by Dr. W. A. Hunter, follows:

"All must agree that the aim of the modern Sunday school is to gather together children and adults and so teach and train them that all their future shall be better and happier. The greatest work of a teacher of character can do is to build a moral character up into the image of the immortal Christ—to make mortals better fit to live and better prepared to change worlds when that inevitable event comes."

"What work is grander—more noble and ennobling?"

"The Sunday school is laying the foundation or planting the principles of real goodness and greatness in millions of child hearts."

A careless teacher is perverting a sacred trust. On the other hand, what a loving heart that can commission to rather souls, win them from badness, and train them for eternal goodness. What manner of man or woman who is not in sympathy with the above and yet the Sunday school has always had to contend with indifference of some, criticism of others and opposition by many.

"Some criticize the 'International System,' but nothing better ever prevailed. Nearly all the great men and women of the world today received part of their training from this system. But great souls have introduced new methods of teaching—The Beginner's Course, the Intermediate course, the Advanced course—thus bringing God and the great Bible truths before the different ages in ways appropriate to their ages and attainments."

"We cannot here elaborate these splendid methods in operation in 'Up-to-date' Sunday schools, but we heartily invite and urge all, old and young, to respond to the Rally Day invitation. Come to Sunday school. Know God better. Know His Book better. Get ready for this life and for the next."

DRY'S HOLD MEETING ON SATURDAY NIGHT

W. M. Holderby Will Speak in Court House Park on Temperance

A mass meeting in the interest of the state-wide prohibition movement will be held in the Court House Park this coming Saturday evening, September 26, at 8 o'clock. The meeting will be promoted by the California Dry Federation. L. M. Timmons, district superintendent of the Fresno district of the State Federation will preside. William Matthew Holderby, lecturer for the National Reform Association will address the open air gathering.

Mr. Holderby was heard once before by a Fresno audience he having been the speaker at one of the meetings held in the Court House Square during the summer under the auspices of the Fresno Ministerial Association. He is one of the most forceful speakers heard here during the present campaign of temperance lectures.

PRICE OF SUGAR DROPS 50 CENTS A HUNDRED

Due to Close of Canning Season and Supply of Beet Sugar

The price of sugar yesterday dropped 60 cents a hundred, according to price quoted by retail dealers here, and is now selling for $7.30. The former price was $7.90 a hundred weight. The drop is due to the close of the canning season and the appearance on the market of a large quantity of beet sugar.

With the opening of the war sugar immediately went from $5.25 a hundred to $8.15. Later the price dropped back to $7.80 where it has been for several weeks.

Local dealers state that the price is uncertain, as it may go either up or down. The supply of beet sugar is confined principally to California and when this sugar is cut off by consumption it is probable that the price will rise. The price may go lower, however, until the supply of beet sugar is exhausted.

plishment is fast passing out of his vocabulary, for he never gets any response to this demand. Liquor is absolutely forbidden in the Iggorote village.

LECTURES AT ADVENT CHURCH

The services held at the Seventh day Adventist church last evening were in the form of Sermonettes on the "Return of the Savior as the Great King." Pastor N. P. Neilson referred to the Savior's first advent to earth, and said in part: "Being born in a stable and cradled in a manger, His birth was lowly. He came not the first time with pomp and glory. But nevertheless, He was the Redeemer of mankind."

"We have His promise that He will come again. He will not come as a babe born in the stable; but as King of Kings and Lord of Lords. It will be the same Jesus!"

This was followed by a short lecture by Evangelist B. E. Deddon on the "Coming of the King" illustrated by means of some beautiful stereoscopic views thrown upon the screen. The subject for this evening is "The Voice of the Elements and the Voice of Man."

POSTPONE MEETING TO HEAR JOHNSON SPEAK

Arlington Citizens Prefer to Hold Indignation Meeting Tonight

Because the voters of Arlington Heights wished to hear Governor William W. Johnson last night, the executive indignation committee on school facilities in that district called off the mass meeting until tonight. Very little has been done by the committee during the last few days, but the members have a plan on foot to present to the voters of that community tonight for their consideration, which may solve the school house problem in the Heights.

Some of the members declare that, should the Board of Education fail to provide the necessary school facilities for Arlington district, legal action will likely be ordered. This phase of the situation will be discussed at the meeting and the citizens will be requested to vote on the question of whether the Heights committee must begin legal procedure against the board to gain recognition relative to establishing buildings suitable for school work on the school site in Arlington.

MINER DIES FROM FALL INTO WELL

Shock From Injuries Cause Death of Weinberg at Sanger

Henry Weinberg, a miner of Watts Valley, died yesterday morning in a sanitarium at Sanger from injuries received when he fell into a well at the bottom of a 50-foot pit on the Earl L. Barron ranch, eight miles northeast of Sanger. The body was brought to Fresno yesterday by Deputy Coroner J. D. Stephens. Inquest was held at Sanger and the jury rendered a verdict of death from shock, caused by falling into the well. Weinberg was crossing the well on a plank. The board broke and he fell to the bottom. The cries of the injured man reached the ears of John W. Bradford. Men were summoned, a rope thrown into the well and Weinberg was hauled to the top. He was treated by Dr. Fleming of Sanger. Weinberg was over 60 years of age.

MODERN BUILDING TO REPLACE LAND MARK

John Boyd Plans Store Rooms on Old Home Site

Another old landmark in Fresno gave way yesterday for a store building, when the home of the late John A. Boyd at 1339 J street was moved to make room for a one-story brick building. John L. Boyd of Goshen, son of the late pioneer, plans to erect a one-story store building on the 50-foot frontage. The plans are indefinite and may be changed to a two-story building. The old Boyd home is being moved to a site on Belmont avenue. Erected in 1884 by John M. Boyd, the house was considered one of the best dwellings in the city. Thirty years later the old home is now in the heart of the city and is the last of the old residences on J street to give way to the wheels of modern industry.

SELMA FUGITIVE IS CAUGHT IN MISSOURI

Roy Williams Will Be Returned to Answer Girl's Charge

Roy Williams, aged 23, wanted here on a charge of criminally assaulting Genevieve Campbell, 17-year-old daughter of N. O. Campbell of Selma, is under arrest in El Dorado Springs, Missouri, according to telegraphic information received yesterday at the sheriff's office. Extradition papers were prepared yesterday afternoon by Deputy District Attorney Dwyer and a deputy from the sheriff's office will leave today for Sacramento to have the papers honored. The warrant for Williams' arrest was issued last Thursday by City Justice Graham and in less than a week the fugitive was located in Missouri and arrested.

BIG CROWDS CONTINUE TO SEE "ESCAPE"

MANY PEOPLE SEE IT FOR SECOND TIME

MAE MARSH IN "THE ESCAPE" AT KINEMA

With each time that the "Escape" is seen again, new points appear that heretofore had not been apparent. The allegorical insertion, where the gates of life are so wonderfully shown. Those who watched it carefully noticed the arrival of the first babe from the great beyond, spreading joy and happiness. But while still in the midst of the rejoicing the young parents are confronted with a new arrival, but this time with mingled feelings of fear and regret. None but a genius like David Griffith could have constructed so extraordinary a scene, nor could any but an idealist have applied it so wonderfully.

Seeking Atmosphere

To make her interpretation of the tenement girl as realistic as possible, Miss Sweet, with a chaperone, resided for several weeks in a settlement house in the very heart of the slum district of New York.

During his stay Miss Sweet taught Sunday school to the children and sewing to the women, all the while studying and absorbing atmosphere for her part in the pictures.

More Than She Bargained For

Owing to her close confinement to her work, Miss Sweet was afflicted with scarlet fever, and for almost two months the production was held up while Miss Sweet was confined to a New York hospital.

The results of her close study was apparent to all at the Kinema the last several days in her interpretation of the tenement girl of the Escape, which is an adaptation of Paul Armstrong's successful play by the same name which caused so much comment in the press all over the United States.

Mae Marsh and Mary Pickford Today. Mae Marsh makes herself such an early duckling in the Escape that one wonders if she can really be pretty, so it is a pleasant surprise when we find that she can be actually beautiful in a pretty little drama, "Lena and the Green," in which she is featured with our own little Mary Pickford as an added attraction to the Escape. Mutual Girl and Pathe Daily.

In addition to this big picture, for the next three days, in accordance with the policy of the Kinema, there will be shown as time and program permits, the regular Pathe Daily with all of the latest war pictures, the well known comedy, Face on the Barroom Floor, as produced by Keystone, will be played. Also a light comedy featuring Mary Pickford and Mae Marsh and the regular Mutual Girl serial—Adv.

NO LACK OF ACTION IN "TREY O'HEARTS"

Thrill After Thrill in Serial at Bijou

Fate costs her influence first on one side and then on the other. The first just seem to find equal favor in her fickle eyes with the worthy, and the smile she turns on Alan and Rose and Angus in one moment may have turned to an ugly frown that brings troubles hurrying in flocks.

When Judith was rescued from the water, cold, wet and almost drowned, it would have seemed to an ordinary person that she would have had enough. But determination, a dogged persistence and stubbornness that was a heritage from her father was the dominant trait in her mixed nature, and her first conscious thought was to resume the quest of vengeance.

Alan, Rose and Angus, too, believe that she will temporarily give up her black mission and will allow them a few months' respite. But spurred on with that indomitable courage and perseverance that used a better end would have been an admirable trait, Judith at once makes overtures to the captain of the tramp freighter which has rescued her that he turn and pursue the smaller craft.

That is so utterly absurd and beyond the limits of reason that he naturally refuses, scoffing a little at her half-brained determination. However, this is but a small interference, and with her men she steals a small boat and they leave the freighter.

They do not go far until the boat strikes a reef and is damaged. They await help. In the meantime the river pirates have escaped from the revenue cutter. Alan, Angus and Rose, too, pass near the reef, are recognized by Judith, and Alan with his generosity again in the ascendancy over his good sense and judgment, goes to the rescue, although Angus and Rose try to detain him. He is captured, and Rose and Angus are unable to help him. They go for assistance. The river pirates pick up Judith, Alan and the men, take them to an island, and Judith bribes them to aid her.

After many vicissitudes, during which there is enough of red-blooded action to stir the blood of the most jaded sear after sensations and thrills, Angus and Rose are tied by Judith where the tide will come up and drown them. But Alan, taking advantage of a solemn hour that engages the attention of his captors, escapes, finds them and rescues them just as the tide has reached their faces and the waves are lapping their very nostrils. After some jockeying with the revenue cutter, they are taken aboard and are safe for the time.

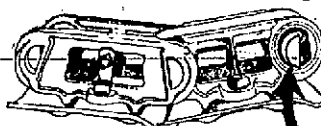

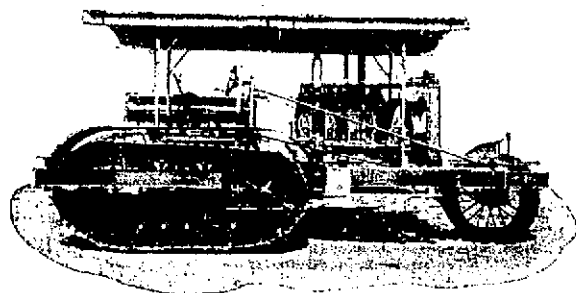

"Adventures in Diplomacy" Tomorrow

In these days of almost universal war, when diplomacy and its tricks, subtleties, intrigues and artifices have given way to the elemental passions of war and all veneer of international courtesy and politeness have been stripped and the true nature of the so-called diplomats is revealed, a story of the workings that result in international hostilities and culminate in terrible wars are most interesting.

"Adventures in Diplomacy" is taken from the story of that name by the

The Era of Gas Power

The farming industry now utilizes more gas-engine horse-power than all other industries combined. During the year 1912, 5,000 farmers were convinced of the practicability of gas tractors. Modern improvements and economical construction are rendering gas tractors fit for work on any soil and profitable on the smallest of farms. Sooner or later you are bound to have one if you are to meet the competition of your more progressive neighbor. The new 70 H. P. "C. L. B." Tractor represents the most perfect machine known. INLAND WATERWAYS WIFE OF VINEYARDIST IS CALLED BY DEATH

Fresno Delegation Departed for Convention Last Night

State Wide Newspaper Is Given Hearty Endorsement

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce in regular session last night authorized W. W. Phillips, Bart Harvey and L. A. Nares to represent the organization at the convention of the Inland Waterways Association of California opening in Stockton at 9 o'clock this morning. Chester H. Rowell, first vice-president, will preside over the convention in the absence of President William H. Wheeler.

Among others who departed on early morning trains for the convention are George S. Waterman, John Fairweather, J. M. Hill of the Fresno Traffic Association, and Henry Haysen. A communication was read by Secretary Robertson from the Chamber of Commerce of San Diego requesting the local association to boost State Newspaper day. Resolutions recommending that every person in the San Joaquin valley buy the special edition issued by Fresno newspapers for the State Newspaper day and mail them to their friends in the East, were passed. The resolutions will be drafted today. The Republican is the only paper in this section of the state that is boosting the San Joaquin valley country by issuing a special edition, and everyone is urged to mail several copies "back home."

Secretary Robertson made his report on the exhibit work done at the Sacramento State Fair. His report was unanimously approved and as a reward for his services in taking care of so many valuable prizes the board authorized him to take a two weeks vacation at full pay. He has not decided when he will take advantage of the offer. Dr. George S. Pittcock of Berkeley appeared before the board and explained the multiple living system for handling tourist or other persons desiring to buy real estate that is approved by the chamber of commerce. The board appointed a committee to meet with a committee representing the Fresno Realty Exchange and dis-

Gov. Hedrick was treated at the emergency hospital last night by Dr. Floyd Burks for a slight concussion of the brain caused by the explosion of an automobile tire. Hedrick is employed at the Schultz garage.

The proposition to erect an electric advertising sign in front of the Southern Pacific Depot on Miraposa street was referred to a committee for investigation.

W. W. Phillips reported that he attended the meeting in San Jose last week of the Yosemite to the Sea Road association and that upon his recommendation a legislative committee was appointed to see if the State Legislature would provide a fund for paying one-third of the cost on roads built by counties.

The advertising committee was authorized to consider the plan of again advertising Fresno county in the Pacific monthly under a yearly contract. The old contract expires with this issue of the publication.

A letter from W. D. Egilbert, commissioner general for the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, was received at the State Fair. The letter follows:

Wm. Robertson, Esq., Secretary, Chamber of Commerce, Fresno.
My Dear Mr. Robertson:—

I desire to congratulate Fresno county and yourself upon your success at receiving the first prize at the State Fair at Sacramento.

I had the pleasure of personally viewing your exhibit and was impressed very much with your magnificent showing, especially your splendid melon display.

Wishing you continued success in your earnest endeavors for your county, I am,

Yours sincerely,

W. D. EGILBERT,

Commissioner-General.

FRESNO WILL NOT HAVE CITRUS FAIR

Committee Appointed By Commerce Chamber Reports Adversely

The proposal to hold a citrus fair in Fresno this winter has been abandoned. The committee appointed several months ago by the Chamber of Commerce to investigate the advisability of holding such a show, reported last night that the growers generally did not look on the proposition with any approval.

Two reasons are given in the report. The first is that the growers do not favor the idea of preparing for two shows. If a citrus fair should be held here, they would have to divide between this and the Panama-Pacific Exposition and they desire to give their undivided attention to the latter.

The present financial depression is given as another reason. It is not believed that sufficient money could be secured to assure the success of the affair.

PRIMER OF EUROPE WAR GEOGRAPHY

Chalons-sur-Marne to Nancy—The country lying between Chalons-sur-Marne and Nancy is rich in history and full of incidents of present-day interest. By air-line the distance between Nancy and Chalons is 55 miles; by rail it is 112 miles, and by canal "The Marne and the Rhine," which extends from the head-of-navigation of the Marne river into Germany, about 120. The first important town out of Chalons by rail is Vitry-le-Francois, with a population of about 9000. This place was formerly fortified and, being located at the crossroads leading to Chalons, Chaumont, Fontenoy and other points, is a strategic position. Beyond Vitry is an uninteresting farming country, after which we come to Bar-le-Duc, with its monument to the boys of the Meuse, who fell in the war of 1870. Its beautiful church of St. Pierre, and its monument of the Michaux family who introduced important improvements in the manufacture of bicycles. Beyond Longeville there is a railroad tunnel two and a half miles long, and a long series of cuts and fills through which the line passes through the heights between the valleys of the Aisne and the Meuse. Ninety-two miles from Chalons is the fortified town of Toul, which resisted the Germans for 40 days during the Franco-Prussian war. A little further on lies Liverdun, where a tunnel carries the Meuse and Rhine canal beneath the town. The scenery in this region is said to be perhaps the most beautiful in the entire journey from Paris to Strasbourg. Nancy is 20 miles from Toul by rail. The railroad from Chalons to Nancy parallels the Marne River and canal to Nancy is Le Petit, crosses the Meuse near Sorcy, and the Rhine near Nancy. West of Bar-le-Duc the valleys run east and west, while east of that point they run north and south, which makes the military problem in the two sections somewhat different.

Chalons to Verdun—The country lying between Chalons-sur-Marne and Verdun is now being fought over by the Allies and the Germans. Eleven miles north of Chalons is St. Mihiel, a temple, the junction point between the Meuse and the Moselle. Three miles further on is the large town of Verdun. Do Chalons, and three miles beyond this a great circular entrenchment, known as Attila's Camp. It was near here that Attila the Hun was defeated in the battle of Chalons—a battle which Sir Edward Creasy reckoned among the 15 decisive battles of the world, in which was successfully checked Attila's mighty attempt to found a new anti-Christian dynasty. Thirty-three miles beyond Chalons is the town of Vailly, where the Allies under the Duke of Brunswick were defeated by the French in 192. This was the famous "cannonade of Vailly," wherein, according to Carlyle, the French Sansculottes "did not fly like poultry." A pyramid on the battlefield contains the heart of Kellermann, one of the French generals in that battle. Eastward of Vailly lies the fertile valley of the River Aisne, which runs midway between Chalons and Verdun. In this valley is situated the town of Sainte Mennehoule, of about 5000 population, and noted for its park. It was here that Louis XVI was recognized by "Old Dragon Drouett," on his attempted flight from

PERSONAL MENTION

Thomas L. Woodruff of Fresno is at the Hotel Grand in San Francisco. Guests at the Fulton-Grand Central are J. C. Allen of Chowchilla; S. W. Thompson, the Visalia rancher, and George H. Tucker of Corcoran.

Among those who viewed the Fresno County Chamber of Commerce exhibit yesterday were F. A. Voesscher of Vancouver, B. C.; William Henderson of Salt Lake, Utah, and J. K. McCowan of Jersey City, Colorado.

Mr. E. Carleton of Tracy; S. G. Dellinger of Alameda; E. Davis of Chowchilla; and C. W. Krutner of Coalinga are at the Sequoia.

Miss Neta Colson and Miss Mabelle Pettengill of the staff of the Hotel Fresno, have returned from their vacation in the Sequoia.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Miller of Imbler, Colorado, are at the Hughes. R. L. Hefley of Coalinga is also at the Hughes. C. A. Bosworth of Oakland and Thomas M. Robinson of New York City visited the Commercial Club yesterday.

France in 1791. Beyond this place lies the picturesque country which contains the famous forest of Argonne, well known from the campaign of 1914, and beyond this the forest of Verdun is reached, 174 miles out from Paris.

St. Dizier to Epinal—St. Dizier, which lies about 35 miles southeast of Chalons, is nearly midway between Paris and Epinal, and is a city possessing a fine view of the city of Chalons, and the town of Bassy, well known as the scene of the massacre of the Huguenots, which was the signal for the religious wars in France in 1562.

The barn in which the Protestants assembled for worship had been rebuilt in the street, and the city hall, the valley of the Marne, south of St. Dizier, is famous for its iron-works and its foundries. Joinville is picturesquely situated on a branch of the Marne and on the slope of a hill on which stood the chateau of the Joinville family. Grand Aulieu, a village of the city of an ancient Roman city, from which numerous antiquities have been taken, including a single mosaic 60 feet long and 45 feet broad. Vaucouleurs is a small town in this region, where Joan of Arc made known her mission to the Sire de Brie, and from which she sent her letters to the French courts. About 13 miles further on is the little town of Domremy, where stands the modest cottage in which Joan of Arc was born. Beyond this point is the town of Mircourt, famed for its embroideries, laces and instruments, and 20 miles southeast of which lies the fortress of Epinal.

Provins—A town of northern France, 55 miles east of southeast of Paris by rail and 55 miles southwest of Chalons, at the junction of the Durnish with the Vouzige, its population is about 8000. During the 13th century its town population is said to have reached 60,000; but the plague of 1348 and the famine of 1349 proved disastrous. The Hundred Years' War completed the town's ruin. A thousand years ago the ruins of Provins were attended by traders from all parts of Europe and its money had currency throughout the continent. The town has a reputation for its mineral waters and its trade in roses, but derives a higher interest from numerous remains of its medieval prosperity.

Bayay—A town of northern France, 15-2 miles south of east of Valenciennes, two-thirds of the way to Maubeuge, with about 3000 inhabitants. Under the Romans, who called it Bagaum, it flourished, but it was destroyed during the invasions of the barbarians, and never recovered its prosperity. It was pillaged, burned several times, and laid waste in the 15th-17th centuries. It stood at the intersection of eight Roman roads, seven of which still remain.

Semlin—A Hungarian town, on the right bank of the Danube, on a bridge of land between Hungary and Serbia, five miles northwest of Belgrade and about six miles from the Serbian frontier. Its population is about 17,000. Much of the town is modern, but its suburb Franzenthal consists partly of mud huts thatched with reeds. It is the principal customs and quarantine station for travelers between Austria-Hungary and the Balkan States. It has a few factories, but its transit trade in grain, fruit, livestock and timber is far more important.

Sarajevo—The capital of Bosnia, Austria-Hungary, where the assassin who precipitated the present war took place. It is situated on a small tributary of the Bosna, 47 miles from the Serbian frontier and 42 miles from Montenegro's border. Its population in 1910 was 51,918, chiefly Serbo-Croatians with small colonies of gypsies and Jews. The city, frequently called "The Damascus of the North," spreads over a narrow valley closed on the east by a semi-circle of hills. Though still half oriental it was largely rebuilt after 1878 in western fashion. The castle and barracks, occupied by an Austrian garrison, stand on a cliff overlooking the city. The sale of embroideries, rugs, embossed fire-arms, gold and silver filigree-work and other native wares, and the manufacture of pottery, beer, silk and tobacco comprise the industries. The neighborhood is rich in prehistoric remains. During the war between Turkey and Austria its ownership was frequently contested. It was burned in 1480, 1844, 1856, 1887 and 1789. In 1878 it was seized by the Austrians.

FLINCHED AT BRIDE'S CHATTER
George Ade at a picnic in a beechen grove at Hazelden Farm, his splendid property in Brook, Ind., said of matrimony:

"Strange is the instinctive dread that some men have of this institution."

"Once, in a parlor car, a young bride said to her husband:

"Jim, our romance began in a parlor car. Did you know it?"

"No, how so?" asked Jim.

"Well," said the young bride, "you had your feet up, dear, and I measured you for that pair of red velvet slippers embroidered with the pink roses—you know, don't you—that was the beginning, dearie."

"At this a young bachelor across the aisle who had his feet up was seen to shudder and draw them quickly down."

JOHN DID HIS DUTY

"Now have you met so, Johnny?"

"Yes," said Johnny promptly.

"That's right. What did you do?"

CLUB ANNOUNCES CABARET PROGRAM

Table Reservations Are Closed—Several Clever Artists to Appear

A program embracing song, dance, jokes and humorous repartee has been provided for the Commercial Club Cabaret entertainment to be given in the club rooms in the Holland building next Saturday evening. Reservations number 250 and the books are closed. The affair will be strictly informal and will be for the members and their families.

Art Smith, of San Francisco, who is taking a vacation from the Orphan circuit, has been suggested to provide entertainment for the evening, along with several other artists. Holden's orchestra will furnish music for the dance and a general round of "good time" is assured by the entertainment committee.

All the latest society dance steps will be featured during the evening by clever artists. H. A. Colburn is scheduled to demonstrate the tango, Hickey Koo, hesitation waltz and one step, which the entertainment committee declares he mastered to perfection while visiting in San Francisco recently. Edmund Kelley will dance the tango and three step during the evening. The committee has arranged for a high class treat, which will be given late in the evening by several well known and acknowledged clever artists.

Music will begin at 7 o'clock and dinner will be served at 7:30 o'clock sharp. Tables will be arranged in a circle near the wall, permitting the dancers to have the "fun" in the center of the hall, while dinner is being served. Everything will go off in high class cabaret style, according to the entertainment committee, which is composed of H. A. Goddard, chairman, W. C. Frahm, Sig. Levy, Frank Enos, H. R. Cooper, C. N. Williams, George Kennedy and Gus Manheim.

The names of the club members who have obtained reservations are:

The Perils of Pauline

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Sanford Marvin, a wealthy manufacturer of automobiles, has worn himself out by overwork. His son Harry, and his adopted daughter, Pauline, love each other, but she wants two years of thrilling experiences seeing life before marrying. Her reason is that she is ambitious to be a writer. Old Mr. Marvin asks to see what she has written. While Pauline and Harry are in search of a magazine containing her story, Mr. Marvin opens the case of a mummy which has just arrived from Egypt. Raymond Owen, his rascally private secretary, helps lift off the front of the case, but leaves the old man to remove the mummy's bandages alone. Mr. Marvin, during a fainting spell sees the half-exposed mummy come to life, step out of her case, take a bracelet from her wrist and try to force it into his nerveless grasp while her lips whisper a strange message from the remote past.

Restored to consciousness by Harry and Pauline, the old man believes it to be a dream until later he finds the identical bracelet on the mummy's skeleton wrist. He promises Pauline one year to see life, and places her in the guardianship of Owen. A final heart attack gives him just time to write on the doctor's prescription blank a brief will. Then he dies. A lawyer tells Owen that he would have permanent charge of Pauline's estate if something should happen to her before marriage. Hicks, a race-track man, and Owen, conspire to kill Pauline. The preceding chapters have dealt with the many effort of the two to accomplish this.

In the present peril, of which this installment is the continuation, Pauline was rescued by Harry after being betrayed by villainous Owen into the hands of the Gypsies who had been paid to kill her. A Gypsy girl in love with the chief helps the two escape, but after Harry nearly kills the chief she seeks vengeance. She sends Pauline a poisonous snake hidden in a basket of flowers.

AS Pauline bent over the basket of flowers that the gypsy girl had brought, Harry drew near, watching, fondly, the picture.

Pauline was all in white, and the glory of her golden hair matched the dewy tresses of the daisies.

"Oh, I wish she had not gone away," cried Pauline. "Was it not beautiful of her to help you find me?"

Harry laughed. "It was," he said, "but it was rather inconsistent of her to give back the bullets to the man she asked me to kill."

"The dear child loved him; she was angry because he drove her away; I saw it all," said Pauline.

"Or perhaps she was jealous of some one," suggested Harry, smiling.

"Well, anyway, it was sweet of her to bring the flowers." Again Pauline bent over the basket, pressing her face among the blossoms.

Suddenly she sprang back with a cry. Harry caught her in his arms and looked back at the basket.

From the rim of it, from among the flowers, slowly rose the head of the rattlesnake.

If they had known that the Gypsy Singoalla was peering through the curtains of the open window, they would have looked to see the smile of hate and happiness that lit her dusky beauty with the menacing brightness of lightning against cloud.

But now they had no thought but of the fang-harbored snake's head lifted with slow, sinister, graceful caution from the basket.

Harry was holding Pauline's fainting form with his left arm. With his right he reached forward swiftly, caught the basket, hurled it with all his might against the far wall of the room.

He laid Pauline gently on the floor and sped toward the basket. As he ran he caught up the cover of the divan.

From the spilled flowers glided the snake, slimy, mottled-yellow. It coiled itself upon the corner of the rug.

There was some strange resemblance between its venomous coils and the tense, vindictive carriage of the gypsy woman at the window.

Harry picked up a chair, and the snake struck at it as he pressed it forward.

With a swift movement he hurled the chair aside and sprang upon the reptile, his face shielded, his hands enveloped by the couch cover. He dropped to his knees and threw the couch cover over the reptile.

The face of the gypsy girl vanished from the window. Singoalla was fleeing into the garden. The snake, fast in the folds of the heavy couch cover, fell where Singoalla had stood a moment before.

Harry had hurled the snake and the cover out of the window and had sprung back to help Pauline.

He found her in the arms of Raymond Owen, who had rushed into the room at her cry.

Harry caught her unconscious form from the secretary as a holy man might snatch a sacred vessel from the hands of an unbeliever.

He laid her on the divan. "Get water!" he shouted harshly at Owen.

The secretary sped out of the room with no sign of resenting the rebuke. In a moment he was back with a pitcher of water. But Pauline had already recovered consciousness and was looking about her with vague, frightened eyes.

"What has happened, Mr. Marvin?" cried Owen.

"Did you see a gypsy girl bring a basket of flowers to the door?" demanded Harry.

"No, indeed. Did she enter here? Has Miss Marvin been stabbed?"

"No, no," sobbed Pauline, the tears of her terror streaming down her face. "It was a snake—a snake hidden among the flowers."

A look of finely feigned alarm came to the face of the murderous secretary.

"Why don't you go and find the girl? What good are you doing here?" demanded Harry.

"You are right. I was so startled I lost my senses," surrendered Owen. He hurried from the room calling to the butler as he ran.

Heads, the butler, came to meet him.

"A gypsy girl who brought a basket of flowers to Miss Pauline—did you see her?" cried Owen, loudly enough for Harry and Pauline to catch the well-devised excitement of his tone.

"I did. I took the flowers from her," trembled the bewildered servant.

"Which way did she go?"

"She started back down the walk, sir. At least, I think—You see, I was hesitating to take the flowers to Miss Pauline. Please, sir—tell me—has anything NEW happened?"

"Follow me; we must find her; she has probably hidden herself in the garden."

Bemis followed Owen out into the garden. They bent through the hedges and the lilac bushes. It was not Raymond Owen's intention or desire to find any one; but it was his ill fortune to do so.

She lay crouched by the roots of one of the lilacs. The secretary drew back in sudden fright at the flare of her bright eyes in the dimness. But Bemis sprang in and dragged her out roughly.

She stood up and eyed them, defiant, almost nonchalant.

"See if she has a knife," said Owen. Singoalla was unarmed.

"I will take charge of her while you get the car to take her to Westbury," said Owen, reassured.

Bemis departed. The secretary bent his head to the car of the pretty gypsy girl.

"Are you not one of Balhazar's gypsies?" he asked kindly.

She drew away with a suspicious, astonished look.

"I mean he whom you now call Michel Mario—but who is really Balhazar, who fled from Milan after a certain accident."

"You know my chief?" she whispered breathlessly.

"He is my friend; he has often served me. And I hope he will do so again. If I were to let you go instead of taking you to jail."

He paused.

"What then?" she demanded.

"Would you carry a message for me to Balhazar?"

"Yes."

"Tell him to meet me by the gate in the woods to-morrow morning, 9 o'clock. Now run," he added, pointing to the trees across the garden.

She glided away with the lightning swiftness of a reptile's fang and vanished in the forest. Owen walked toward the garage, where Bemis was excitedly urging the chauffeur to hurry with the car.

"Never mind the car," said Owen. "The little mixup tripped me up and escaped from me."

"We can catch her, sir!" cried Bemis. "No," she was lost in the woods beyond the gate before I had time to turn around."

The servant cast a half-reproachful look at the secretary, but kept discreet silence.

"Ah, you are better this morning!" exclaimed Harry cheerily, as he entered the breakfast room next day. "You are fresh as a rose—and more beautiful."

"A wild rose, I'm afraid," answered Pauline.

He kissed her fondly. "There is to be a long rest from wildness after this, isn't there?" he asked. "No more adventures?"

"Yes—a rest from wild ones. I am going to have a tame adventure now."

"Polly, Polly! What do you mean?"

"This," she answered, taking the morning paper from the table. Unfolding it, she showed him a headline:

GREAT LORDNOR STABLES TO BE AUCTIONED.

World-Famous Horses of Late Millionaire Sportman Under Hammer.

"Well?" questioned Harry.

"Don't you see?" she tantalized him. "Not in the least."

"I am going to buy Firefly and ride him in the steeplechase handicap."

Harry turned away, despairingly, but smiling. He turned back quickly. "Oh, I see. You'll have ME ride him and break MY precious neck. I thought for a second you meant to ride yourself."

"That's just what I do mean. It will be gorgeously exciting—and perfectly safe."

"Safe?"

"Well, of course, I might be killed by a fall or something. But there wouldn't be any snakes or gypsies or horrid things like that."

He laughed in spite of himself. "All I know is that I shall not permit it," he said. "You will not permit it?" she beamed.

"Then I'll ask my guardian. I may ride Firefly in the steeplechase if I choose, mayn't I, Owen?" she asked brightly.

The secretary had just entered the breakfast room and was watching the two with a questioning eye.

"If we own Firefly, you may," he smiled back at her.

"I told you," she triumphed over Harry. "But we don't own him," said Owen, puzzled.

"We shall this afternoon. The Lordnor stables are being sold. Please give me a great deal of money so that I can't be outbid."

"Does Miss Pauline really mean this?" asked the secretary of Harry.

"She does," he answered with a tone of disgust at what he thought was only Owen's weakness. There seemed no chance of a plot against Pauline in this original scheme of her own.

"She rides wonderfully; I do not see why she should not," Owen concurred.

"You don't seem to see much of anything," declared Harry, turning to his breakfast.

"But you'll take me to the auction?" coaxed Pauline.

"I'll have to—or you'll spend the whole estate on a Shetland pony."

Owen snatched from the room, laughing. Bareheaded he walked into the garden. To the nursery it would have seemed like nothing but a morning stroll, but one who studied the secretary's movements would have noted a directness in his step that seemed to bespeak a purpose beyond the enjoyment of the flower-scented air.

He walked quite across the garden and down into the wood-rose by the path gate. A gypsy was leaning upon the gate and gazing nervously up and down the road. He turned at the sound of Owen's footsteps, and the eyes of the young chief, Michel Mario, gazed apprehensively into the smiling eyes of the secretary.

"How are you, Balhazar?" greeted Owen. "Don't use that name to me," pleaded the gypsy. "She—Singoalla—told me you knew me. Now I know YOU."

"Forgive me, friend, it is hard to call old friends by new names."

"You have work for me? I have come all the way back from Port Vincent to see you."

"It was kind of you," said Owen with the faintest trace of sarcasm. "Yes, I have important work for you."

"Is it the same job?"

"Yes—but an easier task. Have you ever doctored a horse, Balhazar?"

"Many times—but not with my beauty medicine," grinned the chief.

"I mean with a hypodermic needle. I mean a race horse—so that he might possibly fall in a race."

"And injure the rider?"

"Exactly."

"It is very easy—but very dangerous. I should want—"

"I know; I know," exclaimed Owen petulantly. "Here is the money."

Balhazar gloated over the yellow bills. "And here is the weapon."

The gypsy took the needle from the hand of the secretary and thrust it quickly into the inside pocket of his blouse. "Thank you, master. I will do what you say," Balhazar turned to depart.

"Not quite so fast," commanded Owen. "You do not know the place or the time."

"The Jericho track next Saturday," answered the Gypsy promptly.

"You are as shrewd as ever, Balhazar."

"Where else do the gentlemen ride? I shall delight to kill the young gentleman. He is a fiend; he fears nothing."

"But this will be the young lady."

"She will ride? What is the horse?"

"Firefly. It will be bought at the Jericho stables this afternoon. You will be there to see it and to remember it. Good-bye now."

"Good-bye, master—and many thanks."

"Michael Calliban, wealthiest of sportsmen, attended the auction of the Lordnor stables, and seemed bent on adding the entire string of splendid horses to his own far-famed monarchs of the track."

There were a few of the racers of minor reputation that he let go by the board with only a casual bid, but when he wanted a horse; he went against his competitors with a determination that amounted to extravagance.

There was only one time during the afternoon that he met with defeat. This was when the famous steeplechaser Firefly was brought out.

"Five hundred dollars," said Calliban curtly.

"Six hundred," said the musical voice of a girl and the crowd turned to look. It was Pauline Marvin standing by Harry's side on the outer circle of the bidders.

Calliban smiled condescendingly. "A thousand," he said.

"There, you see you can't do it. The horse isn't worth any more," cautioned Harry.

"Fifteen hundred dollars," cried Pauline. "Does she mean that, or is this only a joke?" demanded Calliban, turning to the auctioneer.

"The lady's word is good enough for me. Going at fifteen hundred—going, going—Two thousand dollars. I guess that'll stop any jokes around here," grinned Calliban.

"Three thousand," said Pauline so quickly that even Harry gasped, cut short in mid-protect.

Calliban turned away and strode disgust- edly out of the crowd amid hoofs of laugh- ing.

price," cried Pauline as the smiling groom led Firefly up to her.

The magnificent animal, moved perhaps by genuine appreciation of beauty, thrust its nose instantly between her outstretched arms, and as she patted him delightedly the crowd rippled with spontaneous applause.

Harry joined her on the way to see Firefly put in his stall. He gave the caretaker instructions, and laughingly dragged Pauline away from her new pet.

As they entered their machine, Raymond Owen came from behind the stable. He had been talking there with the Gypsy, Balhazar.

Harry, engrossed in the business complications growing out of the European conflict, had quite forgotten Firefly, and the steeplechase when the day of the great Jericho handicap arrived.

He sat in the library reading a letter when there burst upon his sight through the open doorway a vision that took his breath away.

Pauline, in full jockey uniform, white and blue and yellow, was pouncing on her gleaming black boots before him.

"Polly!" he cried, unable to grasp at first the meaning of the prank.

"Have you cut off your hair?" he added in alarm.

"No; here it is," she laughed, snapping off her visored cap and revealing the masses of her hair piled atop her head.

"Oh, don't do it," he begged. "Look! Here's a letter from the McCallans asking us to their house party in the Adirondacks. We're expected to-morrow. Let's go there instead."

He handed her the letter. Without glancing at it she flicked it into the air with her riding crop and danced out of her room.

He laughed in spite of himself. "So I surrender again," he murmured.

If he had known what was going on at the Jericho stables, he would not have laughed nor would he have surrendered.

Balhazar, the Gypsy, had hovered about the stables all morning watching his chance, in the groom's absence, to do the work he had been paid for.

At last he was able to glide into Firefly's stall. The groom saw him coming out of the stable a moment later, but thought little of it. Firefly was saddled for the race.

Gracefully riding out toward the starting line, Pauline swerved her course a little to avoid the gaze of the gentlemen riders who eyed her curiously. She heard a call from an automobile beside the track and rode over to where Harry and Owen were seated in the car.

Their lifted hats as she bent to shake hands with them caused the crowd to stare in astonishment. Pauline, blushing furiously, sped Firefly to the line.

"That horse works queerly," commented Harry, as she rode away.

"Do you think so?" asked Owen.

"Yes, it's an odd, but its legs are shaky. I wonder—"

But the riders were ready. The signal sounded. The crowd's cheer rose in the names of their various favorites. Field-glasses were unrolled.

"By Jolly, Firefly took the first jump in the lead," cried Harry, a thrill of admiration lightning the worry in his heart.

"He's all right," said Owen.

Over the wide green the horses began to string out, with Firefly ahead.

"She's going to win it; I believe she is," exclaimed Harry excitedly as he and Owen stood in the automobile. "No—not; he wobbled at the fourth jump. He's losing ground."

But Firefly seemed suddenly to grip his strength as one horse passed him. He pulled himself together under Pauline's urging. He regained the lead.

"They came down splendidly toward the homestretch. The bodies of the powerful beasts rose one by one over the last hedge. 'They're over! They're over—or, heaven help her! They're down!'"

Leaving at the last jump, the drugged heart of the great horse had conquered his courage. As he croppered heavily, Pauline sat over his head and lay helpless in the path of the other riders.

Harry, dashing madly toward the track, but hindered far from her, had to turn away his head as the crashing hoofs passed her. When he looked again, attendants were carrying her swiftly to the clubhouse. He sped toward it, Owen following.

Harry tore his way through the excited crowd to the side of Pauline. A doctor was administering restoratives. Pauline opened her eyes and looked about her bewildered.

She saw Harry's anxious face and smiled faintly.

"I've learned a lesson—this time," she whispered.

"It is nothing serious—her shoulder bruised a little," said the doctor.

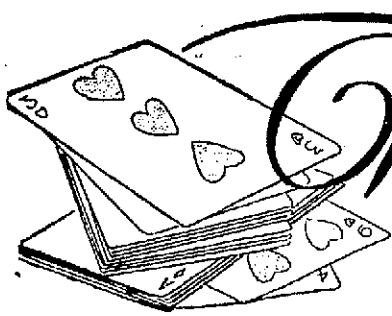

"Thank Heaven!" breathed Raymond Owen with excellent emotion.

But as he walked to the door his brows were knitted in a frown that could not have been born of rejoicing.

THE SUNSET TIDE

SYNOPSIS—The 2 of Hearts is the "death sign" employed by Barcus Trine in the private war of vengeance which, through his daughter Judith, a woman of violent passions like his own, he wages against Alan Law, son of the man (now dead) whom Trine held responsible for the accident which made him a h-l-pless cripple. Rose, Judith's twin and double, learns of her sister's campaign against Alan and leaves her home to aid him, whom she loves. Under dramatic circumstances Alan saves Judith's life and so wins her love. But failure to shake his conspiracy to Rose kindles Judith's jealousy and settles her in her homicidal phantasies. She is largely responsible for a shipwreck in Nan-tucket sound, from which Alan and Rose escape with their friend Barcus in a power-driven lifeboat.

I—THE MASKED VOICE

For a matter of twelve hours the fog, leaden, dank, viscous, as inexorable as the dominion of evil, had wrapped the world in an embrace as foul and noxious as the coils of some great, grey, slimy serpent.

Through its sluggish folds the ponderous, power-impelled lifeboat crept at a snail's pace, its stem parting and rolling back from either flank a heavy-headed sea of gray.

In the bows a young woman rested in a state of semi-exhaustion, her eyes closed, her head pillowed on a cork-belt life-preserver.

In the stern, Tom Barcus presided morosely over the steering gear; and Law was no more jealously heedful of his sweetheart than Barcus of the heavy-duty motor that chugged away so purposefully at its business of driving the boat heaven-knows-where.

Lacking at once a compass, all notion whatsoever of the sun's bearings, and any immediate hope of the fog lifting or chance bring them either to land or to rescue by some larger and less comfortable craft, Barcus steered mainly through force of habit.

And now for more than an hour the silence had been uncannily constant, broken only by the rumble of the motor, the muted lap of water slipping down the side, the suck and gurgle of the wake.

Forebodings no less portentous than Law's crawled in the mind of Barcus. It was as likely as not that the lifeboat was traveling straight out to sea. And gasoline tanks can and oftentimes do become as empty as an official weather prophet's promise of fair weather for a holiday.

More than this, Mr. Barcus was a confirmed skeptic in respect of marine motors.

In view of all of which considerations he presently threw open the battery switch.

And the aching void created in the silence by the cessation of that uniform drone was startling enough to rouse even Rose Trine from her state of semi-somnolence.

With a look of panic she sat up, thrust damp hair back from her eyes, and nervously inquired: "What's the matter?"

"Nothing," Barcus told her. "I shut the engine off—that's all."

Temperers were short in that hour; and Alan was annoyed to think that the rest of his beloved should needlessly have been disturbed.

"What did you do that for?" he demanded sharply.

"Because I jolly well wanted to," Barcus returned in a tone as brusque.

"Oh, you did—eh?"

"Yes, I did—eh! I happen to be hoisting this end of the boat and to have sense enough to realize there's no sense at all in our wasting fuel the way we are—cruising nowhere!"

"Well," Law contended, struck by the fairness of this argument, but unable to calm his uneasiness—"just the same, we might—"

"Yes; of course, we might," Barcus snapped. "We might a whole lot. We might, for instance, be heading for Spain, for all you or I know to the contrary. And in such case, I for one respectfully prefer to have gas enough to take us home again if ever this da-blessem fog lifts!"

And for several seconds longer the stillness strangled their spirits in its ruthless grasp.

"Can't make out anything," he grumbled, looking back. "Start her up—but slow's the word—and 'ware reef!"

"Nothing doing," Barcus retorted curtly. "The motto is now 'Full speed ahead!' as you must know."

"O come! We can't leave a woman out there—in a fix like that!"

"Can't we? You watch!" Barcus grunted malevolently, rocking the heavy fly-wheel with all his might; for the motor had turned suddenly stubborn.

"Alan!" Rose pleaded, laying a hand upon his sleeve. "Think what it means! I know it sounds heartless of me—and it's my own sister. But you know how mad she is—wild with hatred and jealousy. If you take her into this boat, it's your life or hers!"

"If we leave her out there," Alan retorted, shaking his arm impatiently free, "it's her life on our heads!"

At this juncture the motor took charge of the argument, ending it in summary fashion. With a smart explosion in the cylinder, it started up unexpectedly, at one and the same time almost dislocating the arm of Mr. Barcus and precipitating Alan overboard.

It was not given him to know what was happening until he found himself in the water; he struggled to the surface just in time to see the bows of the lifeboat back away and vanish into the mist.

II—THE ISLAND

Not more than twenty seconds could have elapsed before Barcus recovered from the shock of the motor's treachery sufficiently to reverse the wheel, throttle down the carburettor and jump out of the engine-pit.

—and Actually Got Time to Whisper a Word to Alan.

But in that small space of time the lifeboat and Alan Law had parted company as definitely as though one of them had been levitated bodily to the far side of the earth.

It could not have been more than a minute after the accident before Barcus was guiding the boat over what, going on his sense of location and judgment of distance, he could have sworn was the precise spot where Alan had disappeared, but without discovering a sign of him.

And for the next twenty minutes he divided his attention between attempts to soothe and reassure the half-distracted girl and efforts to elude a reply from Alan by stentorian hailing—with as little success in the one as in the other.

"Alan!" he shrieked at the top of his lungs. "Alan! Give a hail to tell us you're safe!"

There was a little pause; he was racking his brains for some more moving mode of appeal when the answer came in another voice—in the voice of Judith Trine, clear, musical, overfascinated with sardonic humor:

"Be at peace, little one—blast no more! Mr. Law is with us—and safe—Oh, quite, quite safe!"

In dumb consternation Barcus sought the countenance of Rose. Her eyes, meeting his, were blank with despair. He shook his head helplessly and let his hands dangle idly between his knees.

With no way on her, the lifeboat drifted with a current of unknown set and strength.

"What can we do?" Rose implored. "We must do something. We can't leave him—Oh, when I think of him there, in her hands, I could go mad!"

"If only I knew," Barcus protested; "but my hands are tied, my will as helpless as my eyes are blind. There's nothing to go by—except the bare possibility that the reef she spoke of may be Norton's."

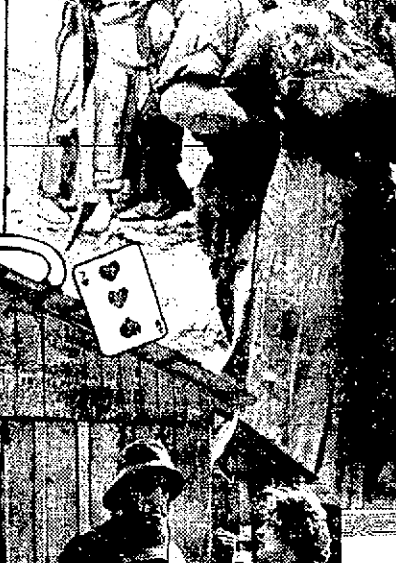

The girl wrung her hands. "But how could Judith get there—and with her men—and ammunition?"

So slowly the current bore the lifeboat toward the beach, and so still the tide that Barcus never appreciated they were within reach of any land until the bows grounded with a slight jar and a grating sound.

With a cry of incredulity he leaped to his feet—"Land, by all that's lucky!"—and, stooping, lent a hand to the girl, aiding her to rise.

Hardly had Rose had time to comprehend what had happened, when Barcus was over the side and wrestling with the bows, dragging the boat farther up upon the shoals.

She was, however, more than one man could manage; and when her stem had bitten a little more deeply into the sands, Barcus gave over the clothing remained to him, after his strenuous experiences of the last forty-eight hours, had been reduced to even greater simplicity: his shirt, for example, now lacked a sleeve that had been altogether torn away at the shoulder.

"No!" he told her, as soon as he saw her with wide awake once more—"don't waste time pitying me. I'm all right—and so is Alan! That's the main thing for you to understand, he's still alive and sound—"

"But where is he? Take me to him!" she demanded, rising with a movement of such grace and vigor that it seemed hard to believe she had ever known an instant's weariness.

"That's the rub," Barcus confessed, squatting

"Well," She Demanded Brusquely, "How Much Longer Do You Think I Am Going to Tolerate Your Interference?"

on the sands and knocking his hair. "I darsent take you to him, Judith might object. Besides, you can see for yourself it isn't safe to mingle with the inhabitants of this tight little island—and you can't get to where Alan is without mingling considerably. Sit down, and I'll tell you all about it, and we'll try to figure out what's best to be done. Maybe we can manage a rescue under cover of night."

And when the girl had settled herself beside him he launched into a detailed report.

"It's Katama Island, all right," he announced; "but a change has come over the place since I visited it some years ago. Then it was a community of simple-hearted villagers and fishermen; now, unless all signs fail, it's a den of smugglers. I noticed a number of Chinese about; and that, taken in connection with the fact that, when I ventured to introduce myself to the village gin-mill and ask a few innocent questions, the entire population, to a child, landed on me like a thousand brick—the two circumstances made me think we'd stumbled on a settlement of earnest workers at the gentle art of helping poor Chinamen evade the exclusion laws."

With a wry smile, he pursued: "As for me, I landed out back of the joint, on the nape of my neck, and took the count, surrounded by a lot of unsympathetic boxes and barrels that had seen better days. And when I came to and started to crawl unostentatiously away, I was just in time to witness the landing of your amiable sister, that gang of cut-throats she keeps on the payroll, and Alan, in company with an choice crew of scoundrels as you'd care to see. I gathered from a few words that leaked out of the back door of the bar-room, that it was as I had thought: Judith had stolen a boat from the ships that picked her up, and rammed it on Norton's reef; and after she gathered Alan in, the schooner of these smugglers happened along, and she hailed it and struck a bargain with the captain and signed co-partnership articles, or something like that. Anyway, her lot and the islanders were soon as thick as thieves, and tanking up so sociably that I actually got a chance to whisper a word to Alan and tell him you were all right, and that he'd find us both down here on the beach, if luck served him with an escape. That was all I got a chance to say, for Judith marched up just then and yanked him off to his cell. I mean to say, he's locked up now in a little stone hut on the edge of the cliff, with the door guarded and the window overlooking a sheer drop of thirty feet or so to the beach. When I'd seen that much, I calculated it was about time for me to get quit of that neighborhood, before Mam-selle Judith nicked me with the evil eye."

"You don't think she saw you?" the girl cried.

"I don't think so," Barcus allowed gravely; and then, lifting his gaze, he added as he rose in a bound: "I just know she did—that's all!"

In another instant he was battling might and main with three willing ruffians, who had come suddenly into view round a shoulder of rock; but his efforts were short-lived, foredoomed to failure. He was weakened with suffering and fatigue—and the three were fresh and had the courage at least of their numbers. He was overborne in a twinkling, and had his face ground brutally into the sand while his hands were made fast with stout rope behind his back. And when he rose, it was to find, as he had anticipated, that Rose's resistance had been as futile as his own; she, too, was captive, her hands bound like his, the huge and unclean paw of one of Judith's crew cruelly clamped upon her shoulders.

They were granted time to exchange no more than one despairing glance when a curt laugh fairly chilled the blood in Mr. Barcus, and he swung sharply between his two guards to confront Judith Trine.

He was by no means poor-spirited, but he shrank openly from the look she gave him, and he planted herself squarely before her sister.

"Well?" she demanded brusquely. "How much longer do you think I'm going to tolerate your interference—you poor little fool! How many more lessons will you require before realizing that I mean to have my way, and that you'll cross me only to suffer for it?"

"So you've tried again?" she inquired obliquely, with a tone of pity. "You've offered him your love yet another time, have you?"

"Silence!" Judith cried in fury.

"Only to learn once more that he would rather death than you?" Rose persisted, unflinching. "And so you come to take your spite out on me, do you? You pitiful thing! Do you think I mind—knowing as I do know that he could never hold you in anything but compassion and contempt?"

"You will see," she said in even and frigid accents. And the light of her mania leaped and leaped again in her eyes like a living flame. "I have prepared a way to make you understand what opposition to me means—"

She waved a hand toward the nearer point of rocks. "Take them along," she commanded.

The understanding between her and her men was apparently complete; for these last, without hesitation or further instructions, marched Rose and Barcus down to the end of the spit and on, into the water.

It was nearly knee-deep before Barcus was halted with a savage jerk, backed up to a rock, forced despite his frenzied resistance to sit down in the water, and swiftly, with half a dozen deft latches of rope and a staunch knot, made fast in that position—submerged to his chest.

This accomplished, the men turned attention to Rose, lashing her in similar wise at Barcus' side. Standing just above the water-line, with every sign of complete calm and sanity other than that unobscured flickering in her eyes, Judith superintended the business till its conclusion, then waved the men away.

Quietly, like well-trained servants, they turned their backs and marched off.

And again, after a brief wait, the woman laughed her short and mirthless laugh.

"The tide will be high," she said, "precisely at sunset. You may time your lives by that. When the sun dips into the sea, then will your lives go down with it."

She turned on her heel and strode swiftly away, with not so much as a backward glance, overtook her men, and passed quickly from sight around the further point of rocks.

Barcus noted that already the waters had risen more than an inch.

Flinched even in his terror by that radiant calm that dwelt upon her, he ventured diffidently: "Rose—Miss Trine—"

She turned her head and found the heart to smile. "Rose," she corrected gently.

"I'm sorry," he said—which was not at all what he had meant to say, "I've done my best. I suppose it's wrong to give up—but they've made it too much for me, this time."

"I know," she said gently.

"You,"—he stammered—"you're not afraid?"

"There is nothing to fear," she said, "but death."

"Then," he said more bravely, after a time—the water now was near his chin—"good-bye—good luck!"

"Not yet, dear friend," she returned, "not yet." The water was now almost level with his lips; it seemed strange that his throat could be so dry, so parched.

He opened his eyes, shuddering.

"It's good-bye now," he faltered.

"Not yet!" her voice rang beside him, vibrant. "Look—up there—along the cliff!"

He lifted his gaze—

Two men were running along the cliff—and the man in the lead was Alan. But his lead was very scant, and the man who pursued was one of Judith's, and stuck to the trail like a blood-hound fresh from the leash.

And now the water was at his lips; Barcus could no more speak without strangling.

Of a sudden he groaned in his heart; though there was no possible way down the cliff, still the sight of his friend alive and unharmed had brought with it a thrill of hope; now that hope died as he saw Alan stumble and go to his knees.

Before he could rise the other was upon him, with the fury of a wolf seeking the throat of a stag.

For an instant they fought like madmen; then, in a trice, the sky-line of the cliff was empty; one or the other had tripped and fallen over the brink, and falling had retained hold of his enemy and carried him down as well.

By no chance, Barcus told himself, could either escape uninjured.

Yet, to his amazement, he saw one man break from the other's embrace, and rise. And he who lay still, a crumpled, inhuman heap upon the sands, was Judith's man.

With a violent effort Barcus lifted his mouth above water and shrieked.

"Alan! Alan! Help! Here—at the end of the point—in the water—help!"

A precious minute was lost before Alan discovered their two heads, so barely above that swiftly rising flood.

Then he ran toward them as he had never run before, and as he came whipped out a jack-knife and freed its blade.

Even so—since it was, of course, Rose whom Alan freed the first—Barcus was half-drowned before Alan helped him in turn up to the beach.

And as this happened the last blood-red rim of the sun was washed under by the waves.

Two minutes later the lifeboat was adrift, and Mr. Barcus, already recovered, was laboring with the flywheel of the motor, stimulated to supreme exertion by the sight of a party, led by Judith, racing madly down the beach.

But it was not until well out from shore and on the way to the safety promised by the mainland—now readily discernible on the horizon—that any one of them found time for speech.

Then Mr. Barcus straightened up from his assiduous attentions to the motor, and observed:

"You bear a charmed life, my adventurous friend. I want to tell you that when I saw you go over that cliff I made up my mind your usefulness would be at least permanently impaired. As it is, I don't mind telling you that if ever I get out of this affair alive, I'm going to have a try at your life, myself, just once, for luck!"

FIFTEEN FROM SOUTH ENTER STATE TRACK MEET HERE OCT. 2

Occidental-Pomona-University of Southern California and Los Angeles Athletic Club Represented; to Name Northern Men This Week

The list of athletes to represent Southern California in the athletic meet to be held in Fresno on October 2, in conjunction with the District Fair has been completed by Bob Weaver, manager. The list contains fifteen athletes. They are: Fred Thompson, Fred Kelly, Howard Drew, Harry Kirkpatrick, Fred Watkins, Ben Watkins, Pete Bagard, Bill Amin, Johnny Cook, Larry Gillette, Ira Courtney, Mike McClure, Langdon Smead, Albert Ray and Tipton.

The Los Angeles will arrive in Fresno on a special train and will line up against the San Francisco Olympic club. Fred Thompson is going in the all-around, on October 2, Thompson, Drew, and Kelly are three champions. Pete Bagard and Borgstrom are both members of the all-American "prep" team. Albert Ray, the Indian, will run in the Republican Cross City race and in the mile and five mile events.

Seward A. Simons, president of the Los Angeles branch of the A. A. U., will be the referee. Bob Weaver has been secured as starter and Wallace Robb will be one of the judges. Weaver will arrive here on September 26. Fred Thompson is entered in eight events of the all-around meet. He will participate in the 220-yard hurdles, 120-yard hurdles, shot put, broad jump, hammer throw, javelin, 55-pound weight, hop, step and jump.

Thompson won the national championship three times. He is now a minister. Harry Kirkpatrick of the Los Angeles is entered in the 120-yard hurdles and the 220 hurdles of the state track and field championship. Kirkpatrick is the best hurdler in southern California having graduated last summer from Occidental college. He is now graduate manager of his old college. William Annin of Occidental college will do the half and the mile. He won the southern California intercollegiate championship in both events this year.

Smead has entered the hop, step and jump and is the winner of last year's Portola championship. Gillette of the Los Angeles Athletic club is a graduate of Pomona and has entered for the 100, 220, 440 and relay races. Frank McClure will do the 440 yard and 220 hurdles as well as the relay. He is a former Stanford star, winning a number of events against the University of California.

Charles Borgstrom of the U. S. C. has entered the pole vaulting event. He is the intercollegiate record holder. S. S. Tipton of the U. S. C. will do the 440 and 880. He was captain of U. S. C. last year and has a record of 1:39.3 for the 880. Fred Watkins of U. S. C. will appear in the high jump and pole vault. Watkins ranks second to Borgstrom in this event.

Fred Kelly is another U. S. C. man who has entered the 120 and 220 hurdles, hop, step and jump, shot put, javelin, broad jump and 56 pound weight. Ray Bagard has entered for the 16 pound shot and discus. Bagard now holds the record for the state high schools.

Howard P. Drew of U. S. C. the negro sprinter, has entered the 100 and 220 yard dashes and hop, step and jump. Drew is one of the most marvelous sprinters of the day, holding the world record in the 100 and 220.

J. Ira Courtney of the L. A. A. C. has entered the 100, the 220 and relay. He was a member of the first and second teams in the 100 and 220 yard dashes and hop, step and jump. Courtney has entered the 440 and relay. Courtney was a winner in the quarter for Occidental. Albert Conkman of U. S. C. has entered the pole vault, high and broad jumps, and hop, step and jump. Ben Ward is another U. S. C. man. He has entered in the 120 yard hurdles and the high jump. Ward ran second to Kelly last year in the intercollegiate hurdles.

Herbert Hauser of the Pacific Athletic association, is yet to announce the runners to represent northern California.

PORTLAND WINS FROM MISSIONS

Doubles in Seventh Give Wolverton His Only Runs

PORTLAND, Sept. 23.—Portland hunched eight of its ten hits off Stanley when they meant runs, today, giving Portland their second straight win over the Missions a score of 6 to 2. Higginbotham pitched steady ball, except in the seventh, when doubles by Tennant and Kohrer, a single and a pass gave the visitors both their runs.

AMERICAN BALLOON RACE PLANNED FOR OCTOBER 7

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—In view of the postponement of the international balloon race which had been set for October 15, and it was called off because the foreign pilots could not compete, it was announced today that the Aero club of America would be asked to sanction an American race. The tentative date is October 7.

EXETER HIGH SCHOOL STARTS RUGBY PRACTICE

EXETER, Sept. 23.—Exeter high school has opened the practice season for rugby and is now putting a large squad of men through the paces. Captain Briggs hopes to meet several schools in practice games this year. A great interest is also being taken in tennis and from present indication, Exeter will be well represented.

BOSTON STILL CLIMBS.
BOSTON, Sept. 23.—An even break was the result of today's double header, Boston winning the first game, 5 to 2, while Cincinnati took the second, 3 to 0. As New York lost twice this afternoon, the local team increased its lead in the pennant race to six games. A liner by Smith that was blocked by a hay as it was bounding into the center field bleachers gave Boston the winning tally in the final inning of the opening contest, the rap going for a home run.

The second game was a pitcher's battle. Lear, formerly of Princeton, having the better of the argument with Davis. The visitors won out in the ninth inning on a pass to Lear, a single by Herzog, a force out by Kilgus and doubles by Miller and Niehoff. It was Cincinnati's first victory in twenty straight games. GIANTS ELIMINATED.
NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—New York was virtually eliminated today from the pennant race, losing a double-header to St. Louis by scores of 2 to 1, and 9 to 0. It was the first time New York had lost two games in one day this season.

The visitors broke Tarsenus's winning streak in the first game, when the local start lost a pitchers' battle to Perritt. St. Louis won the game in the eighth when Butler was hit, stole second and scored on a wild pitch.

Marquard pitched the second game for New York and suffered his twelfth straight defeat. He again was hammered hard. Salter kept New York's hits scattered and was effective in the pinches. Score:

URGE HINDUS TO ARISE IN NATIVE LAND

Speakers From San Francisco Address Mass Meeting

Many Agree to Go Back to Fight England; $2,000 Fund

Three hundred and fifty Hindus gathered in a mass meeting at the Iwata theater, 8 and Kern streets, yesterday noon and for six hours listened to speakers by lecturers favoring a revolution in India against England. A subscription of more than $2,000 was taken up and will be used in sending literature to Hindus throughout the country urging them to return to their native land and be ready to take up arms against England should the revolution materialize. As a direct result of the mass meeting yesterday many Hindus will leave San Francisco Saturday on the Manchuria for India.

Three speakers from San Francisco—leaders of the revolutionists—reached Fresno yesterday for the purpose of presiding at the meeting. Mr. Han Chuan, the principal speaker, was chairman of the meeting yesterday and in a long address explained to the assembled Hindus that now was the opportune time for an uprising against England because of the war that the oppressor was now engaged in. The speaker pointed out that but one-tenth of the money earned by the English in India was expended in the country, that the natives were kept down and that a revolution meant freedom.

Bhagwan Singh and Barkantull Singh, the other two speakers, also along the same lines. They urged that the Hindus return to their native land and spread the news among their brothers and friends that now was the time for a revolution. The speakers declared that India had received assurance from Germany that if they would revolt against England help would be rendered from the Germans. It was explained by the speakers that Hindu lectures were now being held in their native country and at big meetings explaining the situation. The speakers declared that a revolution against England was certain in time, but it was now or never for victory for India.

An organization in San Francisco is now active in spreading the news among the Hindus in California that they are needed in their country to take arms against England. Lectures are being sent to different sections of the state where Hindus are employed in the fruit and muss meetings are being held. The money being received from collections at the meetings is being used in sending printed matter to the Hindus. There is also a general fund and it is reported that much of the state where Hindus are employed in the fruit and muss meetings are being held. The money being received from collections at the meetings is being used in sending printed matter to the Hindus.

It is probable that no more meetings will be held in Fresno. The grape picking is almost finished and the Hindus in a few days will start to move. The next meeting will likely be held in Stockton or Sacramento.

Acid Stomachs Are Dangerous

Nine-tenths of All Stomach Trouble Said to Be Due to Acidity.

A Physician's Advice on Cause and Cure
A famous physician whose successful researches into the cause and cure of stomach and intestinal diseases have earned for him an international reputation, said in the course of a recent lecture that nearly all intestinal troubles, as well as many other ailments, are due to acidity of the stomach. He stated that the stomach is a very delicate organ, and that if it is not kept in proper condition, it will cause a variety of troubles. He advised that the stomach should be kept in good condition by using a small bottle of his "Stomach Remedy" which would neutralize the acid and bring the stomach back to its normal condition. He stated that the remedy was made of natural ingredients and was safe for all ages. He also stated that the remedy was sold in every drug store and could be obtained by mail.

Congressman Denver S. Church will tour the northern part of his district on a speaking campaign beginning at Madera on October 10. This itinerary was announced last night by H. C. Harvey, treasurer of the Fresno County Central committee. Following the close of his campaign through the towns of the north, he will immediately take up an active campaign through the southern part of the San Joaquin valley. He plans to begin this campaign on October 12. Church will probably arrive in Fresno on Tuesday, October 6, and hold a consultation with local Democrat leaders and committee-men. He will be accompanied on the following day to Madera by a large crowd of Fresno Democrats and friends.

The itinerary announced for Church is:
Wednesday, October 7.
Madera, 8 p. m.
Thursday, October 8.
Das Palos, 2 p. m.; Los Banos, 8 p. m.
Friday, October 9.
Gustine, 2 p. m.; Newman, 8 p. m.
Saturday, October 10.
Crow's Landing, 1 p. m.; Patterson, 8 p. m.; Modesto, 8 p. m.

JUSTICE SWIFT IN CASE AGAINST GIRL'S ASSAILANT

Shepherd Rouse, the former fireman, awaits in the county jail the commitment that will transport him to San Quentin penitentiary, in a case which establishes a record in this county for swift punishment following the commission of a crime. In this instance Rouse, a resident of Fresno, was charged with the assault on a girl. The record in the case follows:
September 20 (Sunday)—Arrest for crime.
September 22 (Tuesday)—Complaint filed.
September 22—Held to answer following preliminary examination in the afternoon.
September 22—Information filed.
September 22—Pleas guilty on arraignment and sentenced by Judge Church.

MEN FINED FOR VIOLATING CITY BUILDING LAW

C. P. Nelson and T. H. Nelson were given trial by jury yesterday in the police court on a charge of violating the city building ordinance and were found guilty. Fines of $10 each were imposed. The defendants were arrested for building a house without a building permit. A similar charge against Frank Cary was dismissed on motion of the city attorney. Building Inspector Scott swore to the complaints.

JUDGE RICHARDS TO MEET FRESNO VOTERS

Candidate for Associate Justice Will Campaign in County

Judge John E. Richards, candidate for re-election for Associate Justice of the District Court of Appeals, arrived in Fresno last night and was given a reception at Hotel Fresno by several members of the local bar and business men. Judge Richards plans to campaign here until Saturday evening, and during his stay will make several trips into the county. A local organization will be formed to further his candidacy. Judge Richards is the only San Joaquin Valley county included in the First Appellate district. Judge Richards was in Fresno last April when he addressed the members of the Fresno County Bar Association. He is well known as a jurist throughout the state and has been in the judicial service for seven years. In 1907 Judge Richards was appointed by former Governor Gillett to serve on the Superior Court bench in Santa Clara county. One year later he was elected for a full term by a big majority. Governor Johnson in 1913 appointed Judge Richards to the District Court of Appeals in all the vacancies caused by the death of Judge Samuel P. Hall of Oakland. The high esteem in which Judge Richards is held by the residents of Santa Clara county was evidenced in the recent primary as he received over 13,000 of the 18,000 votes cast.

SWIFT BACK FROM SAN FRANCISCO

If W. Swift has returned from San Francisco where he was called in connection with the sudden sinking of the steamer, Francis H. Leggett, and the drowning of eighty-two people off the coast of Oregon last week. H. W. Swift is vice-president of the Hicks-Hauppman Navigation Company which owns the Francis H. Leggett. Dr. P. Shepherd, also of Fresno, has returned from San Francisco where he attended the meeting of the company as treasurer. Swift states that the vessel was valued at $250,000 and carried insurance of $175,000, which has been paid in its entirety.

INQUEST TODAY OVER ASHURST

A deputy from the coroner's office will hold an inquest at 10 o'clock this morning over the remains of Mart Ashurst, a Stratford, member who was killed Tuesday when his automobile went over a grade near Laton. Arrangements for the funeral will be made after the inquest.
